INTRODUCTION

This is an introduction to the German language. You will not be as fluent as a native speaker by the time you finish working through this book. What you will be able to do, however, is navigate your way through a German speaking country more easily. Each chapter is designed to help you develop the skills you need to get through the situations you will most likely find yourself in while on a business trip or vacation to a German speaking country.

The German language has a reputation for being difficult to learn. The grammar is much more involved and rigid than it is in English. There are three different articles (der, die, das) where English just has one (the) and each of them change depending on which of four functions (or, cases) the noun it is attached to is performing. German grammar is particularly strict about where the verb goes in a sentence.

In English, you can, more or less, throw all the words you need into a sentence without much thought as to the exact order they are in. In German, the verb dictates the order of the entire sentence and if there's two verbs in one sentence, hang on to your hats because the whole sentence is going to have to be reorganized to accommodate them.

I am not telling you this to deter you from learning German. However, it is important before you begin to understand that there are going to be some challenges as there are with any languages. It is important that you have some idea of which unique challenges you can expect with a new language. For German, the greatest challenge will be the grammar.

On the other hand, there are some aspects of German which you will find refreshingly simple. Linguistically, German is very closely related to English. In fact, the two evolved from the same common ancestor. They are both Germanic languages. Because of this, you will notice that there are a relatively large number of cognates (words that are more or less the same in both languages). This will make bulking up your German vocabulary surprisingly easy.

So, the difficulty of the grammar is balanced out by the ease of picking up new vocabulary. You will also be pleased to know that German speakers are quite sympathetic to those who are trying to learn their language. They know the grammar is not easy to master so even if you are butchering their language, they will still be able to understand the idea you are trying to get across. So don't worry too much about speaking in perfectly correct German grammar on your trip. You surely recall an experience in which you listened to a foreign person attempting to speak English. They likely made their fair share of grammatical mistakes but you still understood the general idea, right?

With that in mind, you might still be asking yourself, why should I learn German? If it's going to be difficult and most German speakers will know enough English for me to get around, why bother? Here are just a few things to motivate you to get through this book (and maybe even to sign up for a course and become completely fluent!):

German is the most common language in Europe: In all of Europe, there are more people who speak German as their native tongue than any other language in the region. Learning German will connect you with the more than 120 million native German speakers. Then, you have to take into account the number of people who learn it as their second language. It is the 3rd most popular second language in the world. For perspective, the first is English so with German, you will speak 2 out of the 3 most popular global languages!

Germany is a strong global economy: Germany's economy is the third largest in the entire world and the economic foundation of the European Union. Switzerland (another German speaking country) has the highest standard of living in the world. So if you want to secure your future against anything that might happen, speaking German will ensure that you remain in competitive in the global market.

Americans are pretty much Germans: Americans can trace their ancestry all across the globe. It's one of the things that makes the country so beautifully diverse. However, by far the largest proportion of Americans has German ancestry. The entire Midwest and northern United States is filled predominantly with Americans of German origins. In fact, there are even pockets of native German speakers to be found all throughout the country. So, learning German can put you in touch with America's roots as well.

Be able to read German books: German literature is world renowned for its quality and beauty. You may not think of German as a “beautiful” language but, surprisingly, it can be extremely aesthetic and it is definitely very powerful. It’s no wonder that 1 out of 10 books that are published in the entire world are published in German. German writers produce an average about 80,000 new books per year. So if you are a book lover, learn German to make sure that you never find yourself stuck without something to read!

Germans are more influential than you might realize: many of the world’s most influential thinkers, artists, and scientists were German: Karl Marx, Friedrich Nietzsche, Albert Einstein, Sigmund Freud, Carl Jung, Immanuel Kant, Mozart, Beethoven, Strauss, Bach, Wagner, Franz Kafka, Goethe, Schopenhauer, and countless more. Being able to read their writing in the original German will allow you to connect with your favorite authors and thinkers in ways you never could before.

With all that in mind, you are ready to begin your journey into the German language. Here are a few tips to make sure that you learn as quickly and thoroughly as possible:

Beef Up Your Vocabulary: While the grammar is certainly important so that you can make sense, the most important thing is to make sure you build your vocabulary up. The more words you know, the more ideas you can express. The grammar will come with practice so don’t worry so much about making grammatical mistakes at this stage in the game. Focus primarily on learning as many words as possible to practice your grammar with. Invest in flashcards or download a flashcard study app for your phone so that you can work on memorizing and building your vocabulary. Each chapter in this book will contain a vocabulary list of all the new words you are going to learn in the chapter. Make flashcards for these words so that you can continue working on memorizing the vocabulary even as you move on to the next chapter.

Learn the cognates: chapter two in this book will give you a short list of cognates to get you started but try to look for as many cognates as possible. This will dramatically increase the size of your German vocabulary in a short period of time which is not only useful for the sake of speaking the language but also extremely encouraging as you struggle to learn the grammar.

Create opportunities to use the language: even before you travel to a German speaking country, find ways to use the language. If you don't happen to live somewhere with a lot of German speakers, use the internet. Stream a German radio station, read a German newspaper, watch German TV shows and movies. Try to make sure you hear and read German every single day. There are also some websites where you can find tandem partners who are willing to chat or skype with you in German so that you can practice speaking. The service is free because they usually want help with English in exchange. In this way, you both help each other improve your speaking skills.

Use as many resources as possible: this book is a very comprehensive guide of all the essentials you need to know to speak functional German (not fluent, but usable for everyday situations). If you want to master the language or speed up the process at which you master the concepts in this book, create a study plan that uses multiple resources. Study this book then practice what you have studied by reading, watching, listening, and speaking German as much as possible.

Practice, practice, practice: the simple fact is that learning a language is, above all, about practice. The more you use it, the better you will get. This is how babies learn to speak their first language. They are immersed in it throughout infancy and eventually begin trying to speak it themselves. Unlike a baby, however, you have the added advantage of being able to study the language. When a child doesn't know the word they need, they look for a way around it. If you don't know how to say "I drive the car" you can instead say something like "I go with the car." Language is remarkably flexible. There are multiple ways to communicate the same basic message so if you can't say it the way you want to, use the words you know to say it another way. No matter what, just keep speaking! The more you speak, the easier it will get.

Use mnemonics: this is a learning device to help you remember words. Sometimes we encounter words that we cannot, for whatever reason, seem to memorize as they are. For these words, think up a mnemonic device for the word that will help you commit to memory. For example, there is a very common verb in German that is a “false friend,” that is, it looks like a cognate but it actually has a completely unrelated meaning. The verb is “bekommen” and it does not mean “to become.” It means “to receive.” To help you remember the true definition and not confuse it for the false English friend “become,” use a mnemonic device. You can make up your own but to give you an idea, it can be something as simple as “I become a cheese sandwich.” This works because in English, the sentence is nonsensical. You can’t become a cheese sandwich (at least, not with the current available technology). However, you can receive a cheese sandwich. A mnemonic device can be a nonsensical sentence like the one above to help make it very clear what the definition is. But it can also be a rhyme, a song, or even breaking apart and rearranging the word. Whatever works the best for you for a specific word or concept is a perfect mnemonic device. There are no rules so have fun with it!

Set milestones for yourself: make concrete goals that are achievable. The problem that most people have when they start learning a language is that they just tell themselves “I want to learn German” without understanding exactly what they mean by that. Do you want to become fluent? Do you just want to be functional? Do you want to be able to read a specific book or author in German? Do you want to visit a specific country? Know exactly what your goal is and then break it down into milestones. One way to do this is to use Europe’s framework for language learning. Language skills in Europe are measured according to a standardized set of criteria. Your skills will fall within a spectrum between A1 and C2 with A1 being the most basic level of language skills and C2 being complete native fluency. Within this spectrum, the categories are further broken down into two parts (i.e.- A1-1 and A1-2 and so on for each level). Each one comes with a very specific set of criteria for determining that you have reached the level. These can be very useful in helping you craft specific milestones and goals. Tell yourself rather than say “I want to learn German”, say “I want to speak at an A2-1 level within 3 months” then figure out exactly what the specific criteria are for that level. This book, for example, is intended to bring you from no knowledge of German to level A2-2.

Speak! As soon as you start learning, start speaking. This is the best way to commit the things you have learned to memory. If you don’t have a native speaker available, find someone else who is learning German (or who is willing to start learning German with you). Agree to speak together in German for at least 30 minutes per day. If you do this, you will notice yourself improving at a very rapid pace. Using your language, no matter what your skill level is the most important part of learning. That’s why building the vocabulary is so important so that you have enough concepts to use your newly learned grammar with. If you don’t have an opportunity to speak German every day, make sure to write. Write some sentences or even a whole paragraph using what you already know and what you have just learned from your studies that day.

Keep these tips in mind as you read through the rest of this book. It will help you maximize the results you get from it and help ensure that you are studying as effectively as possible.

As mentioned earlier, this book is broken down into chapters based on everyday situations you are likely to find yourself in as you explore the German speaking country of your choice. The first two chapters provide you with some foundational concepts rather than specific real world situations but with those two chapters, the rest of the book will be much easier to get through so do not skip them. Useful References

Before you begin studying, you should print out the quick references at the end of this chapter. To make studying easier, you should print the entire book out. However, it is quite a few pages and you may not want to use up all that ink and paper. Printing out the quick references at the end will at least allow you to quickly check words, grammatical rules, and other necessary information that you will often need to consider as you complete the practice exercises and reviews throughout this book.

CHAPTER 1: THE BASICS

There are a few basic rules that you will need to understand before you can begin to speak in German. Namely, you will need to know how to pronounce the words as you work your way through this book. In this chapter you will learn:

- Pronunciation of the German alphabet

- Definite and indefinite articles in German

- Grammatical cases in German

- Conjugations for regular verbs

Much of this will seem a bit challenging at first as an English speaker as there are a few sounds in German that will feel unnatural and there are many grammatical concepts that simply don't exist in English. You will likely need to refer back to this chapter a few times as you read the other chapters to remind yourself of some of these rules.

THE ALPHABET

The German alphabet looks more or less the same, with a couple extra letters. The key difference is in how to pronounce the letters. Read this list aloud to practice your pronunciation:

Letter der Buchstabe	Pronunciation die Aussprache	Example das Beispiel
A	ah	der Apfel (apple)
B	bay	der Bruder (brother)
C	tsay	Celsius (Celsius)
D	day	Dienstag (Tuesday)
E	a (like the English A)	essen (to eat)
F	eff	der Freund (Friend)
G	gay	gut (good)
H	hah	der Hammer (hammer)
I	ee	interessieren (to interest)
J	yot	das Jahr (year)
K	kah	der Kugelschreiber (pen)
L	El	das Land (land, country)
M	em	der Mann (man)
N	en	nein (no)
O	Oh	die Oper (opera)
P	pay	die Polizei (police)
Q	koo	bequem (comfortable)
R	er	der Raum (space, room)
S	es Note: when followed by a vowel, it is pronounced as the English z.	der Sommer (Summer) die Maus (mouse)
T	tay	die Tankstelle

U	ooH	(gas station) die Universität (university)
V	fow	der Vogel (bird)
W	vay	auf Wiedersehen (goodbye)
X	kz sound as in "hex"	die Hexe (witch)
Y	Same as the English y	typisch (typical)
Z	ts sound like the end of "pits"	die Zeitung (newspaper)
Ä	Similar to the e in "yellow"	ähnlich (similar)
Ö	Similar to the i in "girl"	Österreich (Austria)
Ü	As in "über," no English equivalent	müde (tired)
ß	Double ss sound	die Straße (street)

SPECIAL COMBINATIONS

Just like in English, certain combinations of letters in German result in a changed pronunciation of the letters. Here are some of the most common ones you will encounter:

Letters die Buchstaben	Pronunciation die Aussprache	Example das Beispiel
Er* (at the end of words only)	Uh	das Messer dass mess-uh (knife)
Er* (in the middle of words only)	Air	merken mair-ken (to notice)
Ch	Guttural "h" (as in Loch Ness)	der Koch dare kochh (the cook)
Tsch	English "ch" (as in church)	Deutsch doitch (German)
Sp	Shp (as in cash payment)	der Sport dare shport (sport)
St	Sht (similar to the end of washed)	Die Stadt dee shtadt (city)
Th	T	die Bibliothek dee bib-lee-oh-tek (library)
Pf	Pf (pronounce both the p and f)	die Pflaume dee pfl-ow-muh (plum)
Ee	Ay (as in say)	der Tee tay (tea)
Ie	Ee (as in feet)	Viel feel (much, many)
Ei	I (as in high)	Klein kline (small)
Äu	Oi (as in spoil)	Häufig hoif-eeg (common)
Eu	Oi (as in spoil)	Heute hoi-teh (today)
Au	Ow (as in cow)	Frau frow

(woman)

You have probably already found some of these sounds difficult to pronounce. There is one more letter combination which, although it doesn't change the sound of the letters, will still strike you as a bit odd. The "kn" combination, just like the "pf" combination you saw above, requires that you pronounce both letters. The "k" does not become silent as it does in English.

Example

das Beispiel

das Knie

the knee

This is pronounced as k-nee. But say it quickly so that it blends more or less into one syllable.

Youtube Activity! Look up some videos in German (preferably with German subtitles so you can see the words as well as hear them) and pay close attention to the pronunciation. It's ok if you don't understand what they are saying, the purpose of this exercise is to hear how German sounds.

DEFINITE AND INDEFINITE ARTICLES (THE, A, AN)

Where English only has one gender, German has three: male, female, and neuter. The definite articles are:

Male: Der

Female: Die***

this is also used for all plural nouns

Neuter: Das

Unfortunately, German does not have any specific rules or ways of knowing which word is which gender (as you can with, say, Spanish). You just need to make sure that as you learn new vocabulary, you learn which article goes with it as well.

While there are no specific rules, there are some clues you can find in the nouns. Below are some of those clues:

Most singular nouns ending in “-e” are feminine.

Nouns that end in -heit, -keit, -tät, -ung, or -schaft will always be feminine.

Nouns ending in “-ie” are always feminine.

Nouns ending in “-ik” are almost always feminine (but there are some exceptions)

Nouns ending in “-in” are feminine when they refer to a female person (job titles, nationalities, etc).

Nouns ending in “-ei” are usually (but not always) feminine.

Days, months, and seasons are always masculine.

All forms of precipitation (Regen, Schnee, Nebel) are masculine.

Words with the “-ismus” ending are always masculine.

Singular nouns ending in “-ner” are masculine (these are usually male forms of occupations, nationalities, etc).

Most occupations are masculine (unless the feminine form is being used)

Most nouns ending in “-er” that refer to people are masculine (unless they refer to a specifically feminine person such as die Schwester or die Mutter)

Many alcoholic drinks are masculine.

Nouns ending in “-chen” or “-lein” are always neuter.

Infinitive verbs being used as nouns are always neuter.

Most of the elements on the periodic table are neuter (with some exceptions).

Colors being used as nouns are always neuter.

Young animals and people are usually neuter.

Most (but not all) nouns ending in “-o” are neuter

Most (but not all) nouns that begin with the prefix “ge-” are neuter

Most (but not all) words borrowed from foreign languages are neuter.

Most (but not all) words ending with “-um” are neuter.

There are a lot of exceptions to these, however, so always learn the article with the word.

To get you started, here are some examples of nouns with each article (all of these are singular):

Der	Die	Das
Der Mann	Die Frau	Das Kind
Der Hund	Die Katze	Das Baby
Der Raum	Die Küche	Das Haus
Der Flug	Die Station	Das Auto
Der Tisch	Die Straße	Das Krankenhaus

The indefinite articles (a/an in English) which correspond to each definite article above are:

Der: Ein

Die: Eine

Das: Ein

The usage of definite and indefinite articles is exactly the same as in English.

PRACTICE 1

For each word, provide the missing definite or indefinite article:

Der Mann, _____ Mann

_____ Frau, eine Frau

Das Kind, _____ Kind

_____ Kugelschreiber, ein Kugelschreiber

_____ Sport, ein Sport

Die Stadt, _____ Stadt

_____ Straße, eine Straße

_____ Krankenhaus, ein Krankenhaus

Der Raum, _____ Raum

Der Tee, _____ Tee

_____ Bibliothek, eine Bibliothek

_____ Messer, ein Messer

Die Pflaume, _____ Pflaume

_____ Baby, ein Baby

Die Zeitung, _____ Zeitung

You may have also noticed that the words are capitalized even though they are not at the beginning of the sentence or the proper name of something. This is because all nouns in German are always capitalized no matter where they are in the sentence or what they are referring to.

THE CASES

German has four cases: nominative, accusative, dative, and genitive. Cases change the article of the noun depending on what grammatical function it serves in the sentence. To very briefly sum them up:

Nominative is used when the noun is the subject of the sentence

Accusative is used when the noun is the direct object of the sentence

Dative is used when the noun is the indirect object of the sentence

Genitive is used when the noun modifies another noun (usually when it is the possessor of another noun)

This is quite a lot to deal with considering English really only uses nominative and accusative. The other two cases (or, noun functions) can be expressed in English but it is done through the use of prepositions and other syntactical cues.

In German, the case will change the article of the noun. Here is a chart for how der, die, and das change depending on the case:

Nominativ	Akkusativ	Dativ	Genitiv
Der	Den	Dem	Des
Die	Die	Der	Der
Das	Das	Dem	Des
Die (plural)	Die	Den	Der

PRACTICE 2

Reread the rules above about which case is used when. Then, fill in the missing articles for the nouns in the sentence below (make sure to use the right case!)

Der Wolf isst ____ Mann.
The wolf eats the man.

Die Frau schenkt ____ Kind ein Spielzeug.
The woman gives the child a toy.

Das ist das Auto ____ Mannes.
That is the man's car.

Der Hund spielt mit ____ Katze.
The dog plays with the cat.

Das Baby sitzt auf ____ Tisch.
The baby sits on the table.

Die Katze läuft durch ____ Raum.
The cat runs through the room.

Wo ist das Baby ____ Frau?
Where is the woman's baby?

Das Krankenhaus ist an ____ Straße.
The hospital is on the street.

Die Küche ist in ____ Haus.
The kitchen is in the house.

Das Auto fährt nach ____ Station.
The car drives to the station.

FORMING THE PLURAL

In English, just throw an “-s” or an “-es” at the end and you’ve got yourself a plural noun. In German, it’s not quite the same. There are few consistencies among plural nouns in the language. The one thing that they all have in common is that they take the article “die” when they become plural. This is the case all the time, no matter what the article for the singular noun form is.

Beyond that, though, there are five different ways to make a noun plural (more if you count the changes that occur depending on the cases you learned about above).

The “-e” ending

The majority of nouns that have just one syllable in the singular form will just add an “-e” to the end to form the plural. Sometimes the stem will change as well.

der Schuh becomes die Schuhe das Haar becomes die Haare die Maus becomes die Mäuse

The “-er” ending

Nouns that take an “-er” ending in their plural form are usually either masculine or neuter. There will sometimes also be a stem change to the word.

das Kind becomes die Kinder der Mann becomes die Männer das Buch becomes die Bücher

The “-n” or “-en” ending

Nouns in this category are made plural by adding an “-en” or “-n” to the end. If the singular form of the noun ends in a consonant or with an “au” or “ei”, they take the “-en” ending. If they end in a vowel (excepting “au” and “ei”), they just take an “-n.” There are (of course) some exceptions such as die Schwester below which just takes an “-n” ending despite ending in a vowel.

die Frau becomes die Frauen.

der Mensch becomes die Menschen.

die Schwester becomes die Schwestern.

Furthermore, words that end in “-in” in the singular form will take the “-nen” ending in the plural form.

die Musikantin becomes die Musikantinnen.

The “-s” ending

These nouns are like English nouns. In fact, most of the words in this category are originally foreign words that the German language has adopted. To make them plural, simply add an “-s” to the end as you would in English.

die Kamera becomes die Kameras.

der Chef becomes die Chefs.

das Kino becomes die Kinos.

No change to the ending

Some words in German are the same whether singular or plural (except the article changes from its singular form to “die”). Typically, words ending in -chen, -lein, -el, -en, or -er do not change for the plural form. Sometimes, there will be a stem change in the plural, but for the most part, the word will remain completely the same.

das Mädchen becomes die Mädchen der Garten becomes die Gärten das Fenster becomes die Fenster die Mutter becomes die Mütter

Because there are so many ways to pluralize a noun in German, it is best to just learn the plural form along with the word when you first encounter it. When you make vocabulary flashcards, make sure that the flash card contains the following information for all nouns:

The definition

The singular article (der, die, das)

The plural form

The singular and plural form in all cases*

*There are some nouns which will change depending on the case it is in (usually for dative or genitive) and since there is no general rule for when this happens, it is good to include this information right from the beginning so that you will memorize those words in all their forms).

VERB CONJUGATION

VERBEN KONJUGATION

Most verbs in German have the “-en” ending with a few exceptions. Regular verbs are all conjugated the same way (irregular verbs are a whole other can of worms that we will, for the most part, ignore for the time being).

To see how to conjugate regular verbs, we will use the verb “gehen” meaning “to go”

Gehen

Ich (I)	gehe
Du (you [informal])	gehst
Er/Sie/Es (he/she/it)	geht
Ihr (you [plural, informal])	geht
Wir (we)	gehen
Sie/sie (You [formal]/they)	gehen

As you can see from the chart, to conjugate regular verbs, simply take off the “-en” ending and replace it with the appropriate conjugated ending.

PRACTICE 3

EXERCISE 1

The following is a list of regular verbs. On a separate sheet of paper, write down all six conjugations for each verb in this list.

spielen (to play)

sagen (to say)

kaufen (to buy)

kommen (to come)

lachen (to laugh)

lieben (to love)

leben (to live)

kochen (to cook)

machen (to do/to make) lernen (to learn/study)

EXERCISE 2

Fill in the correct conjugated form of the verb (in parentheses) in each of the following sentences.

Ich _____ Deutsch. (lernen)
I study German.

Du _____ Fußball. (spielen)
You play soccer.

Er _____ seine Mutter. (lieben)
He loves his mother.

Ihr _____ zusammen. (lachen)
You (plural) laugh together.

Wir _____ Abendessen. (kochen)
We cook dinner.

Sie _____ neue Kleidung. (kaufen)
You (formal) buy new clothes.

Wann _____ sie? (kommen)
When are they coming?

Was _____ du? (sagen)
What are you saying?

Er _____ in Österreich. (leben)
He lives in Austria.

Was _____ Sie gern? (machen)
What do you (formal) like to do?

CHAPTER 1 VOCABULARY

*(sich) interessieren is a reflexive verb which you will be learning about in chapter 5 of this book.

**sein is an irregular verb which you will learn about in chapter 3 of this book.

REVIEW

Answer the following questions to test your memory of the rules you have learned in this chapter:

Describe the five different ways to pluralize a noun.

Name at least one clue for telling if a noun is der, die, or das.

When do you use the nominative case?

When do you use the accusative case?

When do you use the dative case?

When do you use the genitive?

CHAPTER 2: VOCABULARY FOUNDATIONS

Now that you have gotten yourself acquainted with the pronunciation and some of the basic grammar, you need to build up a foundation of some essential vocabulary that you will be using frequently throughout this book and as you speak with others in German. In this chapter, you will learn:

Numbers 1-100

Adjectives

Cognates

How to tell the time

How to ask the time

THE NUMBERS

You will notice that the numbers in German are constructed differently than they are in English. Where we would say twenty-one, German does it in reverse.

As an example: the German word for twenty-one is einundzwanzig (which literally translates to “one and twenty”). In older forms of English, the numbers were constructed in the same way they are in German today but with the influence of other languages such as Latin and French, the order flipped.

1	Eins	Aynz

ADJECTIVES

Adjectives are extremely useful words in any language which allow us to provide more specific detail and description to our sentences. Building up a strong arsenal of adjectives is a great way to quickly expand the range of ideas you can express.

Adjectives change their endings depending on the gender of the noun they are describing. You will forget to do this a lot as you first begin speaking but it actually isn't so complicated relative to other grammatical concepts in German. Below you will find a list of some of the most useful adjectives in German together with their changed forms depending on the gender of the noun they describe.

Adjektiv	Bedeutung	Der	Die	Das
ganz	whole	ganzer	ganze	ganzes groß	big, tall	großer	große	großes
gut	good	guter	gute	gutes
neu	new	neuer	neue	neues
erste	first	erster	erste	erstes
lang	long	langer	lange	langes
klein	small	kleiner	kleine	kleines
alt	old	alter	alte	altes
jung	young	junger	junge	junges
hoch	high	hoher	hohe	hohes
einfach	simple, just	einfacher	einfache	einfaches
letzte	last	letzter	letzte	letztes
gleich	like, similar	gleicher	gleiche	gleiches
schön	beautiful, great	schöner	schöne	schönes
eigen	own	eigener	eigene	eigenes
möglich	possible	möglicher	mögliche	mögliches
spät	late	später	späte	spätes
wichtig	important	wichtiger	wichtige	wichtiges
genau	exactly	genauer	genaue	genaues
weitere	additional	weiterer	weitere	weiteres
kurz	short	kurzer	kurze	kurzes
stark	strong	starker	starke	starkes
schwach	weak	schwacher	schwache	schwaches
richtig	correct	richtiger	richtige	richtiges
verschieden	diverse, different	verschiedener	verschiedene	verschiedenes
früh	early	früher	frühe	frühes
schlecht	bad	schlechter	schlechte	schlechtes

You may have noticed the pattern already from reading the list. Essentially, the adjective takes on an ending which matches the gendered article of the noun:

Der : -er ending

Die : -e ending

Das: -es ending

This gets a little more complicated when you adjust for the different cases you learned about in the first chapter but that is not important at this early stage.

COGNATES

Cognates are what make learning any new language a little bit easier. These are words that are spelled and/or pronounced similarly in both languages and carry the same meaning.

There are countless examples of these for English speakers learning German because English is originally a Germanic language (that has since been dramatically altered by the heavy influence of Latin and French during the middle ages). If you have ever attempted to read Beowulf in the original Old English, you can see the strong connection between English and German.

Here is a list of some of the most useful cognates you will find in German:

akzeptieren	blond(e)
aktiv	das Buch
die Adresse	der Bus
der Agent	die Zigarette
der Alarm	der Kaffee
all/alle	der Tee
allergisch	kompliziert
Amerikaner(in)	das Konzert
April	der Kompromiss
das Baby	kosten
der Ball	kreativ
Balkon	tanzen
der Band	trinken
das Bett	existieren
das Bier	falsch
die Familie	das Eis
fantastisch	die Idee
das Fett	der Idiot
der Film	intelligent
finden	der Job
vorwärts	kaputt
frisch	lernen
die Hälfte	der Markt
das Hobby	die Natur
der Hunger	das Paar

Youtube Activity! Search for some videos about German-English cognates. Listen to (and repeat aloud) the differences in pronunciation. For extra practice, you can look for some videos about “false friends.” These are words that sound the same in English and German but do not mean the same thing.

CHECKPOINT

Before we move on to our first proper lesson (asking and telling time), test your knowledge so far. Do the test below first without looking above for the answers. Then, when you have done everything you can without referring to any other resources, you can go back through the earlier sections of this chapter and review the parts you couldn't recall.

Provide the correct definite and indefinite article for the following nouns:

___/___ Mann

___/___ Frau

___/___ Kind

___/___ Tisch

___/___ Auto

___/___ Küche

___/___ Raum

___/___ Straße

___/___ Krankenhaus

___/___ Zeitung

Now change those articles into the following cases:

___ Mann (akkusativ)

___ Frau (dativ)

___ Kind (genitiv)

___ Tisch (dativ)

___ Auto (akkusativ)

___ Küche (dativ)

_____ Raum (nominativ)

_____ Straße (akkusativ)

_____ Krankenhaus (dativ)

_____ Zeitung (genitiv)

Now put them into their plural form and put the plural into accusative, dative, and genitive:

der Mann: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

die Frau: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

das Kind: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

der Tisch: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

das Auto: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

die Küche: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

der Raum: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

die Straße: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

das Krankenhaus: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

die Zeitung: _____

Akkusativ: _____

Dativ: _____

Genitiv: _____

Now conjugate the following verbs into the appropriate form and write the definition in English underneath:

Spielen (ich): _____

Sagen (du): _____

Kaufen (Sie) (You): _____

Kommen (wir): _____

Lachen (er): _____

Lieben (ihr): _____

Leben (ich): _____

Kochen (sie) (She): _____

Machen (du): _____

Lernen (ihr): _____

Write the German words for the following numbers:

1 _____

5 _____

37 _____

98 _____

3 _____

12 _____

77 _____

43 _____

100 _____

52 _____

Die Zeit

Time

Read the following short dialogues aloud a few times:

Dialog 1:

Person 1: Entschuldigen Sie bitte, wie viel Uhr ist es? Person 1: Excuse me, sir/ma'am, what time is it?

Person 2: Es ist 16 Uhr.

Dialogue 1:

Person 1: Excuse me, sir/ma'am, what time is it?

Person 2: It is 4 p.m.

Dialog 2:

Person 1: Entschuldigung, wie spät ist es?

Dialogue 2:

Person 1: Excuse me, what time is it?

Person 2: Es ist 14:30 Uhr.

Person 2: It is 2:30 p.m.

There are a few key differences when it comes to telling the time in German. In the first place, German speakers (and most Europeans, for that matter) tend to use the 24 hour clock, especially when it comes to appointments and scheduling (hence 16 Uhr for 4 p.m. and 14:30 Uhr for 2:30 p.m.). So you need to make sure you at least memorize the numbers for 0 through 24.

You can, however, also use the 12 hour clock and specify which time of day you mean. German does not use a.m. or p.m. Instead, you would say:

8 Uhr in der Früh

8 a.m. (literally, 8 o'clock in the morning)

2 Uhr nachmittags

2 p.m. (literally, 2 o'clock in the afternoon)

Practice 1

Üben

Draw hands on the clock to match the times indicated below.

17:30 Uhr 00:00 Uhr 22:15 Uhr

Practice asking for the time and answering aloud (with a friend or by yourself).

REVIEW

Count as high as you can without looking at the list of numbers.

List as many cognates as you can remember without looking at the list.

Ask what time it is (either form of the question).

Answer with the current time.

Ask what time it is again (using the form you did not use the first time).

Answer with the opposite of the current time (i.e.- if it is 10 a.m., answer with 10 p.m.)

CHAPTER 3: INTRODUCE YOURSELF

In this chapter, you will learn the basics for introducing yourself to someone and having a small, polite conversation. First, however, you need to learn the difference between Du, ihr, and Sie. In English, we just have one word for “you” and we use it to address anybody whether it is the president of the United States or our pet goldfish.

HEY, YOU!

In German, on the other hand, there is a different form of “you” which depends on two things:

Formal or informal conversation

How many people you are addressing

First, let’s break down the formal and informal singular.

Du is the informal “you” in German. You use it with family members, friends, children, pets, and so on. Sie is the formal version. You would use this to address your boss, a stranger, someone older than you, and anyone with a high ranking office (such as a mayor, congressman, senator, and so on). This is also the form you use when doing a job interview.

The rules for this are not so strict as they once were. Often, you will hear younger people addressing other young people they have never met with Du rather than Sie (which you would expect when they are addressing strangers).

Furthermore, because you are a non-native speaker (a fact native speakers will pick up as soon as they hear your accent), people will be more understanding if you use the incorrect form.

So don’t stress yourself out about this formal vs. informal you. Simplify this by asking yourself two questions before addressing a person:

Do I know this person?

If yes: go to the second question.

If no: use “Sie”

Do I want to show extra respect to this person?

If yes: use “Sie”

If no: use “Du”

Now, for the second factor in choosing the correct “you”: how many people you are addressing. There are two plural versions of “you” in German (an informal and a formal). The informal plural you is ihr. The formal plural you is Sie.

Yes, the formal plural “you” is the same as the formal singular “you” which makes things slightly easier. Whether it is one person or a group with whom you need to be formal, it’s going to be “Sie”.

Ihr, on the other hand, is more like “you guys” or “y’all” and is only used among friends, family, and so on. You are likely going to have a hard time remembering to use this at first since there is no English equivalent. So try to make sure you give some extra time to practicing this form and committing it to your memory.

To Be Sein

Quickly, before we jump into the lesson for this chapter, take a look at how you conjugate sein. It is an irregular verb but one that you will be using a lot so you should take the time to learn the special conjugations.

Sein

Ich	bin
Du	bist
Er/Sie/Es	ist
Wir	sind
Ihr	seid
Sie/sie	sind/sind

Greetings die Grußworte

das Wort	Bedeutung
Guten Morgen	good morning
Guten Tag	good afternoon
Guten Abend	good evening
Hallo!	hello
Servus!	hi, hello, goodbye
Wie geht es Ihnen?	How are you? (formal singular and plural)
Wie geht es dir?	How are you? (informal singular)
Wie geht es euch?	How are you? (informal plural)
Mir geht es gut	I am well.
Mir geht es ok	I am ok.
Mir geht es schlecht	I am not doing well.
Und Ihnen/dir/euch?	And you? (formal singular and plural, informal singular, informal plural) auf Wiedersehen!

Tchüß!
Bis später!
Bis dann!
Bis morgen!
Wir sehen uns!
Gute Nacht!

Goodbye!
Bye!
until later!
until then!
until tomorrow!
See you!
Goodnight!

START TALKING!

With the vocabulary list above, you can get creative with your greetings. First read through the following dialogues aloud. Then, in the practice section, you will be writing your own dialogues!

Formal:

Frau Schmidt: Guten Morgen, Herr Mauer!

Herr Mauer: Guten Morgen, Frau Schmidt. Wie geht es Ihnen?

Frau Schmidt: Mir geht es sehr gut! Und Ihnen?

Herr Mauer: Mir geht es auch gut! Auf Wiedersehen, Frau Schmidt.

Frau Schmidt: Bis morgen, Herr Mauer.

Informal:

Josef: Servus, Angelika! Wie geht's?

Angelika: Servus! Mir geht's ok. Und dir?

Josef: Mir geht's gut. Bis später, Angelika!

Angelika: Wir sehen uns, Josef!

In the formal dialogue, you encountered two unfamiliar words. If you have not looked up their definitions already, here they are:

sehr: very auch: also

In the informal dialogue, you saw „wie geht's“ and „mir geht's“. These are abbreviated forms of the longer phrases that you have in the vocabulary list above. In informal situations, it is very common to abbreviate in this way. It's the equivalent of saying „how's it going?“ instead of „how are you?“

In fact, if you were to translate „wie geht es dir“ literally, word for word, it would be: „how goes it with you?“ It sounds strange in English but this is grammatically correct in German.

Practice

Üben

On a separate sheet of paper, create two dialogues of your own using the vocabulary you learned above. Make sure that one is formal and one is informal. You should also make sure that each speaker in the dialogue speaks at least two times. To challenge yourself further, attempt to use the informal plural you!

Introductions

Vorstellen

Here are some basic phrases you will use to introduce yourself and to ask people about themselves:

die Wörter

Wie heißen Sie?

Wie heißt Du?

Ich heiße...

Wie alt sind Sie?

Wie alt bist Du?

Ich bin....Jahre alt.

Wann treffen wir uns?

Um wie viel Uhr treffen wir uns?

Passt.

Das passt mir nicht.

Wie ist das Wetter?

Es regnet.

Es ist sonnig.

Mir ist kalt.

Mir ist heiß.

Bedeutung

What is your name? (formal singular and plural)

What is your name? (formal singular)

*My name is...
(literally: I am called...)*

How old are you? (formal singular and plural)

How old are you? (informal singular)

I am...years old.

*When are we meeting?**

At what time are we meeting?

Ok. (That works.)

That doesn't work for me.

How is the weather?

It is raining.

It is sunny.

I am cold.

I am hot.

*In German, there is only one form of the present tense: present simple. Therefore, to literally translate this sentence, you would say “when we meet?” because there is no present continuous (i.e.- are meeting) as there is in English. With that in mind, avoid the mistake of trying to form the present continuous in German by saying things like “wir sind treffen” as this will make you sound pretty silly to a native speaker.

DIALOGUE

Here are two sample dialogues using the vocabulary you have learned so far:

Formal:

Herr Mauer: Guten Tag!

Frau Schmidt: Guten Tag! Wie heißen Sie?

Herr Mauer: Ich heiße Herr Mauer, und Sie?

Frau Schmidt: Angenehm! Ich heiße Frau Schmidt.

Herr Mauer: Freut mich! Wie ist das Wetter?

Frau Schmidt: Schlecht. Es regnet.

Herr Mauer: Das ist schlecht. Mir ist kalt.

Frau Schmidt: Mir auch. Auf Wiedersehen!

Informal:

Angelika: Hallo, Josef! Wie geht's?

Josef: Servus, Angelika! Mir geht's gut. Und dir?

Angelika: Mir geht's ok aber mir ist heiß!

Josef: Ja, es ist sehr sonnig.

Angelika: Um wie viel Uhr treffen wir uns morgen?

Josef: In der Abend. Um 18 Uhr. Passt das dir gut?

Angelika: Nein, das passt mir nicht gut. Treffen wir uns um 19 Uhr?

Josef: Ja, passt. Bis morgen!

There are a few new words in these dialogues. Here are the translations:

Angenehm: pleasure to meet you!

Freut mich: pleased to meet you!

aber: but

Um: in this case, it means “at”

*In der*:* in the

**in this case, “der” is not the masculine article but the accusative form of “die” which you learned about in chapter 1.*

REVIEW

Create two dialogues (one formal, one informal) using your new vocabulary (and vocabulary from the previous two chapters as well, if you like). Make sure each speaker has at least 4 lines.

Identify at least 3 people in your life with whom you would use the formal Sie if you were to speak to them in German.

Identify at least 3 people in your life with whom you would use the informal Du if you were to speak to them in German.

Write down all 6 conjugations of the verb sein. Try to do it from memory first and then fill in the ones you missed after.

CHAPTER 4: TELL US ABOUT YOURSELF

Now that you have a foundation in grammar and vocabulary and you have learned to introduce yourself, it's time to talk in a little more detail about yourself.

You can use many of the adjectives, verbs and other words you have learned in the previous three chapters. So, before moving on with this lesson, review the vocabulary lists (or the flashcards you have made) in order to refresh your memory.

For the grammar lesson in this section, we will focus on prepositions. You already encountered your

There is no direct, one-to-one translation of prepositions from English to German. Many will have overlapping meanings that can make learning them a challenge.

Furthermore, the noun being modified by the preposition (i.e.- the table in the sentence "the book is on the table") will need to be in the accusative, dative, or genitive case depending on the preposition used. With some, you will always use accusative and others, always dative. This will make things a little easier. However, there are some with which can be used with multiple cases. For those, you will have to learn how to tell when to use which.

A BASIC GUIDE TO PREPOSITIONS

There are 4 main categories of prepositions:

Those that always take dative

Those that always take accusative, and;

Those that take both depending on how it is being used (wechselpräpositionen)

Those take the genitive case

Here is a simple chart so that you can have an easy reference to all of them:

Dativ Präpositionen		Akkusativ Präpositionen		Wechsel Präpositionen
ab	from, off, away, starting	bis	until, to, by, before	in	in, into, at, on, within
außer	except, besides, excluding	durch	through, across, by, via, due to, by means of	an	at, on, by, to, in
zu	to, toward, at, for, in, on	für	for, per	auf	on, onto, to, at, up, in
nach	toward, after, to, past, on, following, of	ohne	without	neben	beside, alongside, nearby
bei	for, by, at, on, with, upon, during, near	gegen	against, toward, about, versus	hinter	behind, afterward, at the back of
von	by, of, from, off, out of	um	about, around, at	über	about, above, across, over
aus	from, out, of, made of			unter	among, below
mit	with, by, involving, at			vor	before, ago, of, from, off
seit	since			zwischen	among, between
gegenüber	toward, versus, across from, opposite to

GENITIV PRÄPOSITIONEN

anstatt/	instead of
statt
außerhalb	outside of
innerhalb	inside of
trotz	despite, in spite of
während	during, in the course of
wegen	because of

Take a look at the genitive prepositions again. Notice that all of the English translations use the word “of.” This will make identifying them easier. Here are some examples of common phrases you might read or hear using genitive prepositions:

Während der Woche studieren wir.

During the week we study.

Or: In the course of the week we study.

Trotz des Wetters fliegen wir nach Deutschland.

In spite of the weather we are flying to Germany.

For those that are always dative or always accusative, you will simply need to memorize them. Make flashcards which indicate their meaning and the case they use. You will get some exercises shortly to further practice them. So don't worry if it feels like an information overload right now. It just takes practice and memorization.

The wechselpräpositionen aren't as difficult as you might think. There is one simple rule for determining whether you use the dative or accusative case with them.

The Wo oder wohin? Rule

Just ask yourself, is the preposition describing where something is (Wo?) or is it describing where something is going (Wohin?)

If it is the first, use dative. If it is the latter, use accusative. Now, you just need to memorize which ones are the wechselpräpositionen and each time you use them, ask yourself:

Wo oder wohin?

Here is an example. Let's use the wechselpräpositionen "auf":

Wo: Das Buch liegt auf dem Tisch.

Where: The book is laying on the table.

Wohin: Ich lege das Buch auf den Tisch.

Where to: I put the book onto the table.

In the first instance, the book is already on the table. Therefore, dative is being used for table (dem Tisch). In the second case, the book is in the process of being put (literally: laid) onto the table. Therefore, because the sentence describes something currently in progress, accusative is used.

PRACTICE 1

ÜBEN

In the following sentences, fill in the correct article (accusative, dative, or genitive) for the noun being modified by the preposition.

Das Buch liegt auf _____ Tisch.

Ich spreche mit _____ Mann.

Ich laufe durch _____ Park.

Ich gehe zu _____ Krankenhaus.

Der Hund sitzt vor _____ Haus.

Wir arbeiten bis _____ Abend.

Trotz _____ Wetters spielen wir Fußball.

Die Lampe hängt über _____ Tisch.

Ich gehe in _____ Schule.

Während _____ Konzerts trinke ich Bier.

Now let's build some new vocabulary. Here are some words you can use to describe your family and where you are from.

Meine Familie	Bedeutung	Woher?	Bedeutung die Mutter	mother	Woher kommst du?	Where are you from? (informal singular)
der Vater	father	Woher kommen Sie?	Where are you from? (formal singular and plural) die Schwester	sister	Ich komme aus...	I come from... der Bruder	brother	Er kommt aus...	He comes from... das Baby	baby	Amerika	America das Kind	child	die Vereinigten Staaten	the United States die Tante	aunt	Kanada	Canada der Onkel	uncle	das Vereinigtes Königreich	the United Kingdom die Großmutter	grandmother	Irland	Ireland der Großvater	grandfather	Australien	Australia die Oma	grandma	Südafrika	South Africa der Opa	grandpa	Mexico	Mexico die Cousine	cousin (female)	Deutschland	Germany

der Cousin	cousin (male)	Österreich	Austria die Nichte	niece	die Schweiz	Switzerland der Neffe	nephew	Belgien	Belgium die Urgroßmutter	great grandmother	Frankreich	France der Urgroßvater	great grandfather	Dänemark	Denmark die Geschwister	siblings	Schweden	Sweden der Schwiegervater	father in law	Spanien	Spain die Schwiegermutter	mother in law	der Nord	north die Schwägerin	sister in law	der Süd	south der Schwager	brother in law	der Ost	east die Halbschwester	half sister	der West	west der Halbbruder	half brother	Wo lebst du?	Where do you live? (informal singular) die Adoptivschwester	adopted sister	Wo leben Sie?	Where do you live? (formal singular and plural)
der Adoptivbruder	adopted brother	Ich lebe in...	I live in...
Mutti	mom	Er lebt in...	He lives in...
Vati	dad	Das Hotel	Hotel die Eltern	parents	links	left rechts	right
		geradeaus	straight ahead
		Wo wohnst du?	Where do you live? (informal singular)
		Wo wohnen Sie?	Where do you live? (formal singular and plural)
		Ich wohne in...	I live in...
		Er wohnt in...	He lives in... das Haus	house
		die Wohnung	apartment die Stadt	city
		das Dorf	small town

In this list, you saw two ways to ask “where do you live?” In German, there are two different words depending on what specifically you are asking. Leben refers to your permanent living situation. You might currently be spending a few months living in a different location but in the long term, you live in one permanent location. Wohnen refers to more short term living situations as well as specific types of housing. Therefore, you typically use leben for countries, states, and cities and wohnen for the type of housing (house, apartment, etc.) as well as temporary residences. For example, one might say:

Ich lebe in Berlin. Dort wohne ich in einer Wohnung.

I live in Berlin. I live in an apartment there.

or:

Ich lebe in Amerika aber jetzt wohne ich in der Schweiz.

(Normally) I live in America but now I am living in Switzerland.

PRACTICE 2

Üben

Read this short paragraph in which a person describes his family. Then answer the questions below.

Servus! Ich heie Michael und ich lebe in sterreich. Das ist meine Familie. Wir kommen aus Deutschland. Meine Eltern (vor der Reste der Familie) leben in Deutschland. Meine Mutter heit Anna und mein Vater heit Thomas. Hinter meiner Eltern stehe ich und meine vier Geschwister (von links nach rechts: Susanna, Jakob, Esther, und Daniel). Wir haben alle rote Haare. Ich habe viele Nichten und Neffen. Susanna ist die alteste Schwester. Sie und meine Schwgerin wohnen in einem groes Haus in der Schweiz. Jakob, mein junger Bruder, wohnen in einer Wohnung in dem Vereingtes Knigreich.

FRAGEN

Woher kommt Michael und seine Familie?

---

Wo leben die Eltern von Michael?

---

Wie viele Geschwister hat Michael?

---

Wie heißen die Geschwister?

---

Wie heißt die Mutter?

---

Wie heißt der Vater?

---

Wo wohnt Susanna?

REVIEW

Which prepositions are wechselpräpositionen?

When do you use dative with a wechselpräposition?

When do you use accusative with a wechselpräposition?

Which prepositions always use the genitive case?

Which prepositions always use the dative case?

Which prepositions always use the accusative case?

Write a short paragraph about you and your family. Include their names, ages, and where they live. Try to use as much of the chapter 4 vocabulary as you can.

Imagine you are in Vienna, staying at a hotel next to Stephansdom (the red star marked 1 on the map below). Using the map, describe how you would walk from Heldenplatz (the red star marked 2 on the map below) back to your hotel. Remember to use your prepositions!

CHAPTER 5: IN YOUR FREE TIME

In this chapter, you will learn to talk about your hobbies and what you do on your free time. To do this, you will need to learn about reflexive verbs (another grammatical concept that is more or less absent in English). Reflexive verbs refer to those things that we do to ourselves (or to another person) such as bathing, brushing our teeth, and getting ourselves ready. There are also some reflexive verbs which are used for talking about the things you like or in which you are interested in.

The two main reflexive verbs you will need for this chapter are:

(sich) gefallen: to like

(sich) interessieren: to be interested in

What characterizes a reflexive verb is that it is always attached to a pronoun (sich) which is either dative or accusative.

(sich) gefallen is a dative reflexive verb meaning that you will use dative pronouns when you conjugate it. For example, to say that you like to eat, you would write:

Gefällt mir essen.

mir is the dative pronoun for me and gefällt is the third person singular for please. Literally, this sentence would translate as “it pleases me to eat.” If you want to say that you like multiple things, you need to use the third person plural:

Gefallen mir essen, tanzen, und Fußball spielen.

As you can see, mir stays the same in both cases because you are still referring to yourself.

To say that you are interested in films, you would write:

Ich interessiere mich für Filme.

Here, you will notice some differences with the first verb. In this case, the verb is conjugated in the first person. You are the one taking interest and the person being interested is also you. You are literally saying “I interest myself in films.”

This verb, in addition to being reflexive, is always attached to the preposition für. To state that you do not like something, simply add nicht after the reflexive pronoun:

Gefällt mir nicht tanzen.

PRACTICE 1

Write two sentences about things you like and two sentences about things you are interested in.

To talk about other people, make sure to change the reflexive pronoun you are using to match the person you are talking about. And in the case of (sich) interessieren, you will conjugate the verb to match the person as well.

Refer to the vocabulary list for this chapter to see more reflexive verbs and some examples of hobbies, activities, and interests you might like.

Before you start talking about your interests, let's look at how to contradict someone in German if they say you don't like something that you actually do like.

In addition to ja and nein, German has a third response, doch which means "yes" but only in response to negative statements. For example, if your friend said:

Du interessierst dich nicht für Bücher.

If you actually are interested in books, you would respond:

Doch! Ich interessiere mich für Bücher.

You will practice these new skills in the review section below.

Youtube Activity! Search for TV shows or music videos in German. You can find many episodes of popular American shows like The Simpsons dubbed into German. These are a great tool for familiarizing yourself with the language. Also look for German speaking bands that you like and listen to their songs. The catchier the song, the better because if the lyrics gets stuck in your head, it will help you learn the language!

REVIEW

Write a short paragraph describing your likes and interests. Make sure to include at least two negative statements (about things you don't like or that upset you.)

Interview a friend or think about a close friend (or family member) and write a short paragraph describing their likes and interests. You should also include two negative statements as well.

Write a short paragraph describing your morning routine, using the reflexive verbs in your vocabulary list as well as normal verbs.

Below are a series of statements using reflexive verbs. For each sentence, write the exact opposite. Use doch when applicable. The first one has been done for you as an example.

Ich interessiere mich nicht für Horrorfilme.

Doch! Du interessierst dich für Horrorfilme. _____

Gefällt dir tanzen.

_____

Jakob ärgert sich nicht über Kunstfilme.

_____

Ich mache mir Sorgen über reisen.

_____

Sie beeilen sich nicht.

_____

Deine Lieblingsfilme sind Liebeskomödien.

_____

Jakob gefällt ihm Literatur.

---

Meine Lieblingshobbys sind zelten und wandern.

CHAPTER 6: MAKING SMALL TALK

You might have noticed that in the review for chapter 5, some answers used nicht and some answers used kein. There are two different ways to negate a sentence depending on what exactly is being negated. Here are the rules for when to use which.

Use nicht...

before a preposition
unless the preposition is at the beginning of the phrase, then nicht drops to the end.
when the verb is at the end of the sentence when the entire sentence must be made negative before an adjective before nouns that have definite articles

Use kein...

before nouns with indefinite articles before nouns with no articles

*note: kein is used like an indefinite article. That means you have to change the ending to match the gender of the noun it is being used with.

PRACTICE 1

Fill in the blank with nicht or kein for each of the following sentences. Refer to the rules above when necessary.

Ich interessiere mich _____ nicht für Literatur.

Du machst dir _____ Sorgen.

Er denkt ihn tanzen _____ schön.

Warum ärgerst du _____ über Popmusik?

Gefällt mir _____ Horrorfilme.

Meine Lieblingsmusik ist _____ Rockmusik.

Now that you are familiar with that, it is time to take a bit of a leap into a tougher subject: the past tense. There are multiple forms of the past tense in German. In this chapter, we will just be concerned with the Perfekt tense. This is the one that is used most often while speaking.

It is easier in the sense that all past tense conjugations of the verb will be the same. However, using it requires changing the structure of your sentence. Let's take a look at an example.

Present Tense: Ich fahre mit dem Auto.

Past Perfect: Ich bin mit dem Auto gefahren.

The first thing to notice is that the verb fahren has shifted to the end of the sentence and now has the prefix ge-. You also now have a new verb, sein (ich bin).

To form the past perfect for verbs that talk about motion or states of transition (driving, walking, moving, coming, going, growing up, etc.) use the present tense form of sein, move the verb to the end of the sentence and put it in its past perfect form. Many verbs just require adding the prefix ge- to the front but there are many different variants so always be sure to learn the past perfect form when you learn a new verb.

Fortunately, there is just one past perfect form for each verb. So, whether you were driving, your friend was driving, or a guy named Fred was driving, fahren will always be conjugated as gefahren. You only need to change the conjugation of sein (which you already learned earlier in this book).

Using sein with the past perfect is not so common, however. Most verbs do not indicate motion or states of transition (sitting, sleeping, eating, talking, etc.). For these verbs, you use haben. Here is an example.

Present Tense: Ich esse Abendessen.

Past Perfect: Ich habe Abendessen gegessen.

As you can see, the past perfect form of the verb underwent the same process as fahren did earlier. It moved to the end and it took on the *ge-*prefix. Because essen begins with a vowel, the extra g was needed for the prefix.

Rather than sein, however, this verb uses the present tense of haben (to have). It is very similar to the English sentence „I have eaten dinner“ except that the structure is different.

With the past perfect, the verb will always be at the very end of the sentence. No matter how long the sentence is, the verb will stick to the end. Check out this sentence as an example:

Ich habe Mittags an der Schule zu viel Suppe, Kartoffeln, und Brot gegessen.

Today at school, I ate too much soup, potatoes, and bread.

No matter how many additional details you wish to include in your sentence, you will put all of them between before the past perfect form of the verb.

Let's practice the past tense now. For this first practice, we will just use words that use haben.

For your reference, here is how you conjugate haben in the present tense:

Haben

to have ich habe

du hast

er/sie/es hat

wir haben

ihr habt

Sie/sie haben

PRACTICE 2

Rewrite the following sentences using past perfect.

Wir essen Frühstück.

---

Du spielst Fußball.

---

Ich sehe einen Dokumentarfilm.

---

Er wohnt in einer Wohnung.

---

Ihr lebt in der Schweiz.

---

REVIEW

Describe the steps for rewriting a present tense sentence into past perfect.

Which two present tense verbs are used with the past perfect?

Write a list of all the past perfect forms of each verb in the chapter 6 vocabulary list above (include the appropriate present tense verb).

In which cases do you use kein to negate a statement?

Was hast du letzte Woche gemacht?

Write a short paragraph describing what you did last weekend. Feel free to make stuff up if you like.

CHAPTER 7: ARRIVALS AND DEPARTURES

To talk about your travel plans or plan a trip, you will need to learn how to talk about the future. Fortunately, the future tense (unlike the past tense) is very simple in German. To talk about something that will happen in the future, you use the verb “werden”. It has a few irregular conjugations so let’s start by taking a look at how you conjugate it for each person:

On its own, “werden” means “to become.” However, when used in combination with another verb, it means “going to” or “will.” Let’s look at an example:

Ich werde Frühstück essen.
I am going to eat breakfast.

As with the past tense, when you add “werden” to the sentence, the second verb gets pushed to the very end and takes its present infinitive form no matter who is doing the action. You only conjugate “werden” to match the person doing the action.

Now try it yourself.

PRACTICE 1

The following sentences are written in past tense. Rewrite them in future tense.

Ich habe Frühstück gegessen.

---

Du bist durch den Park gelaufen.

---

Er hat spät geschlafen.

---

Wir haben zu viel Bier getrunken.

---

Ihr seid zuhause geblieben.

---

Sie haben Lebensmittel gekauft.

---

Ich bin nach Deutschland geflogen.

---

Er hat die ganze Nacht getanzt.

---

Wir sind früh aufgestanden.

---

Ihr habt eine Pause gemacht.

---

In the vocabulary list at the end of this chapter, there are some new words to help you talk about your travel plans. Skip ahead and read through them. Use these as a reference to complete this next exercise:

PRACTICE 2

Read this short text aloud (practicing your pronunciation) about someone's plan to visit Berlin and then answer the questions afterward.

Ich heie Mario und ich mchte whrend des Sommers reisen. Ich werde morgen einen Flug buchen. Ich werde im Juli nach Berlin fliegen. Dort werde ich zwei Wochen bleiben. Julia, eine Freundin von mir, wird mit mir reisen. Aber sie wird nur eine Woche in Berlin bleiben. Dann wird sie nach Frankreich mit dem Auto fahren. Dort wird sie ihre Familie besuchen.

Wohin wird Mario reisen?

Wann wird Mario fliegen?

---

Mit wem wird Mario reisen?

---

Was wird Julia in Frankreich machen?

---

Wie lang wird Mario in Berlin bleiben?

---

Wie wird Julia nach Frankreich gehen?

---

Wie lang wird Julia in Berlin bleiben?

---

CHAPTER 7 VOCABULARY

Verben	Bedeutung	Nomen	Bedeutung
(sich) mit Einheimischen anfreunden	to make friends with the locals	die Architektur	architecture der Strand	beach

		der Urlaub	vacation
		der Zug	train
		Sonstige Wörter
		Traum-	(prefix) dream
		Lieblings-	(prefix) favorite

**besichtigen* and besuchen both mean to visit but they are used slightly differently. Besichtigen is used to talk about superficial visits, such as seeing a site or going to a museum. These are short and usually involve just looking around. Besuchen, on the other hand, refers to more involved visits such as visiting friends or family. It is also used when you want to say you are visiting a city or country. This sort of visit involves more interaction, you do more than just look around. You talk, sit down for a meal, hang out, etc.

***möchten* is another word for „to want” in addition to wollen which you learned earlier. The difference between the two is that where wollen simply means “to want”, möchten technically means „would like.“ It is a more polite way to say that you want something. Technically, it is a contraction of two verbs: würden (meaning „would“) and mögen (meaning „to like“). It may not look like a contraction of these two words but, somehow, it is.

REVIEW

DER TRAUMURLAUB

Plan your dream vacation. Where will you go? When will you go? With whom will you go? How will you get there? What will you do while you are there? Make sure to use the future tense that you practiced in this chapter.

CHAPTER 8: ON THE STREET

Once you have arrived, you will need to navigate the streets. You already learned some basic terms for directions in chapter 4. In this chapter, you will learn more vocabulary and learn how to ask for (and understand) directions.

First, let's look at some of the common road signs you will see in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and much of Europe actually. They differ from the road signs in the United States and might seem a little bewildering at first.

One Way Street

Stay to the Right

Bus Stop

Hospital

Shared Pedestrian/Cyclists Lane

Separate Lanes for Pedestrians and Cyclists

End of Pedestrian Zone

No Vehicles of any Kind Allowed

Follow Alternate Route

Stop Here on Red

Toilet

Before going on, refer back to the chapter 4 vocabulary in order to refresh your memory of the key vocabulary you'll need for asking and giving directions. You should also review the prepositions as these will come up a lot in directions.

Many of the prepositions you learned are often combined with the definite article that follows them. As you will hear and see these contractions a lot, it is important to get familiar with them. Keep in mind however, that these are all contractions of prepositions and definite articles. You do not use contractions with indefinite articles. Furthermore, use the full form rather than the contraction when you want stress the word (just as you would say do not rather than don't in English to stress the word "not").

	das	dem	der
an	ans	am
auf	aufs
bei		beim
in	ins	im
hinter	hinters
über	übers
unter	unters
von		vom
vor	vors
zu		zum	zur

The contractions that are in bold are the most common that you will hear and see. These should be your priority when you are working on memorizing them.

In addition to combining prepositions with definite articles, they can be combined with question words as well as turned into adverbs. To form the question, add the prefix wo- to the beginning of the preposition. If it begins with a vowel, add an r to form the prefix wor-. To make a preposition into an adverb, you simply add the prefix da- in front of it. If the preposition begins with a vowel, add an r to form the prefix dar-.

Here is a list of prepositional questions with their corresponding prepositional adverbs:

Wobei	Whereby, whereas, where	dabei	thereby, present, close by
Wodurch	How, by what means, in what way	dadurch	thus, thereby, in this way
Wofür	Wherefore, for what	dafür	therefore, for that
Wogegen	against what	dagegen	against that
Woher	from where, wherefrom, wherefore, whence	daher	from there, therefore, hence
Wohin	to where, whereto, wither	dahin	to there, thither
Womit	how, with what	damit	with that, therewith
Wonach	after what, whereupon, of what	danach	after that, thereupon, of that
Worauf	whereupon, whereat, on top of what	darauf	thereupon, thereat, on top of
Woraus	whence, what from	daraus	hence, thereof, out of that
Worin	wherein, in what	darin	therein, in that
Worüber	what about, above what	darüber	about that, above that
Worunter	under what	darunter	under that

Wovon	from what, whereof	davon	from that, thereof
Wovor	what of, in front of what	davor	of that, in front of that
Wozu	wherefore, why, whereto, to what end	dazu	thereto, to that, to this end, in addition to that
Worum	what about behind what	darum dahinter	about that behind that Wohinter

You are simply using the question “where” and the adverb “there” to build new words with the prepositions. This is similar to older forms of English which used phrases like “wither” and “thither.” We have retained some of these older words like “therefore” and “thereby” as well as “hence” (which remains despite the loss of both the adverb and the preposition, henn + genitive s, from which it was constructed).

These will come in handy when asking for directions as well as for constructing sentences with multiple clauses (which you will learn to do in the next chapter).

Here are some common phrases which will be helpful in asking for directions.

Wie komme ich zur....?

Wohin fährt dieser Straßenbahn?

Wo ist die...?

Wohinter steht das...?

Welche Richtung fährt dieses Bus?

Ich habe Sie nicht verstanden. Können Sie das bitte wiederholen?

To give directions, use these phrases:

Biegen Sie links hier ab.

Sie müssen dahinter rechts abbiegen.

Dieser Straßenbahn fährt dahin.

Dieses Bus fährt in Richtung Hauptbahnhof.

Der Bahnhof steht auf der linken/rechten Seite.

PRACTICE 1

Following is a list of responses. Write a possible question that could have preceded the response. The first one has been done for you.

Die Oper steht dahinter.

Wohinter steht die Oper?_____

Der Bus fährt in Richtung Friedhof.

_____

Sie müssen nach dem Park links abbiegen. Der Museum steht gerade dahinter.

_____

Ich gehe dahin.

REVIEW

Rewrite each of the following sentences using the appropriate prepositional adverb. The first one has been done for you as an example.

Ich bin allergisch gegen Erdnüsse.

Ich bin allergisch dagegen.

Die Oper steht hinter dem Theater.

---

Der Theater steht vor der Oper.

---

Das Buch liegt unter dem Tisch.

---

Die Leute kommen aus dem Museum.

---

Ich gehe gerade ins Kino.

---

Die Lampe hängt über dem Boden.

---

Ich fahre durch die Stadt.

CHAPTER 9: IN THE RESTAURANT

During your trip, you will be visiting restaurants frequently. So it will be good to learn how to place an order, ask for the check, and learn some common vocabulary words for food and drinks.

First, however, let's look at how to form sentences with multiple clauses in German. A clause which can stand on its own as a complete sentence (known as an independent clause in English) is the Hauptsatz in German which literally means "main phrase" or "main clause." In German, you can add a dependent clause or Nebensatz to any part of a Hauptsatz. It can go in front, at the end, or even mashed right into the middle of it. Below are 3 examples to show you each case. The underlined portion of the sentence is the Nebensatz that is being added on to the Hauptsatz.

Dass das Wetter so schlecht ist, kann ich nicht glauben.

Ich möchte der Wein, der aus Frankreich kommt.

Ich habe das Buch, das Stephen King geschrieben hat, gelesen.

There are some consistencies no matter where the Nebensatz is located. The conjugated verb is always moved to the end of the phrase no matter what other verbs are also present. Notice in the the third example that if the Nebensatz were to be written as a Hauptsatz it would be in a different order:

Stephen King hat das Buch geschrieben.

Also note that in the same example, if you were to cut the Nebensatz entirely, it would read Ich habe das Buch gelesen. The Nebensatz is in the middle here because the noun which it is modifying (das Buch) is in the middle. If we were to move the position of das Buch, we would move the Nebensatz to go along with it.

This same thing is happening with the second example. In these cases, think of the Nebensatz as a very detailed adjective describing the noun in the sentence. In the first example, on the other hand, something else is happening. Here we have the word dass which can be translated in English as "that" but only in reference to things that are spoken, thought, and so on.

That is, you do not use dass to refer to a specific object. You would not point at a table and say dass Tisch to say “that table.”

In the first example above, you are saying “I can’t believe that the weather is so bad.” In German, you can put the phrase “that the weather is so bad” in the beginning in order to add further emphasis to it.

This is not an option in English which is, in many ways, stricter in regard to sentence structure than German. In German, as long as you make sure that the verbs are in their correct positions, just about everything else in the sentence can be moved around wherever you want in order to emphasize the part of the sentence that you want to emphasize.

Note also in the first example that the Hauptsatz on the end is slightly reordered. Rather than Ich kann, it is written as kann ich. This reversal happens anytime the Hauptsatz is at the end. If we were to write this same sentence in another way (more similar to the English structure) it would like this:

Ich kann nicht glauben, dass das Wetter so schlecht ist.

When you want to say that you think, believe, read, heard, or said something, you will always use a Nebensatz that begins with dass. This is because you are saying “I think that...” or “I heard that...” and so on. Let’s practice.

PRACTICE 1

Translate the following sentences into English. Remember to use the Hauptsatz + Nebensatz structure that you have just learned. Use the vocabulary list at the end of this chapter to help you with any words you do not know. The first one has been done for you.

I find that the film is very good.

Ich finde, dass der Film sehr gut ist.

I said that I am hungry.

---

I heard that the book is boring.

---

I can't believe that this summer is so cold.

---

I would like the Beer that is from Germany.

---

There are some key phrases that you will say or hear often in a restaurant. Read this brief dialogue aloud between a waiter and customer:

Kellner: Willkommen im Restaurant! Was hätten Sie gern?

Speisender: Ich hätte gern ein Wiener Schnitzel.

Speisenderin: Ich nehme ein griechischer Salat bitte.

Kellner: Gerne. Und möchten Sie auch was zum trinken?

Speisender: Ja, ich nehme ein großes Bier.

Speisenderin: und ich hätte ein Glas Wein.

.....

Speisender: Entschuldigung! Zahlen, bitte.

Kellner: Gerne! Zahlen Sie zusammen oder getrennt?

Speisender: Zusammen, bitte.

Kellner: Dann die Rechnung beträgt 20 Euro.

Speisender: 22 Euro, bitte. Die Rest ist für Sie.

Kellner: Danke schön!

Youtube Activity! Search the phrase “im Restaurant” in youtube. Listen to a few different dialogues. There will be multiple different options on there so you will have a choice. Listen for the words you have learned in this chapter as well as some new ones. If possible, add subtitles to help you learn the new words.

REVIEW

Imagine you are at a restaurant with a friend in Germany. Write a short dialogue like the one you read earlier in this chapter. Use the vocabulary list to help you.

Translate the following sentences into German. Pay attention to the Hauptsatz + Nebensatz structure.

The book that is called The Sun Also Rises is on the table.

The restaurant that I like is behind the museum.

The film that I don't like is in theaters.

The wine that I ordered is bad.

The beer that I ordered is on tap.

I think the wine is from France.

I said that I would like to have the wienerschnitzel.

I heard that you serve good salads.

I think the restaurant is behind that.

The soup of the day that we have today tastes very good.

You look as if you are hungry.

They look as if they are thirsty.

We look as if we are full.

Add –e, -er, -en, -n, -s, or do not add anything.

Refer to the list of clues in chapter 1.

Use the nominative case when the noun is the subject of the sentence.

Use the accusative case when the noun is the direct object of the sentence.

Use the dative case when the noun is the indirect object of the sentence.

Use the genitive case when the noun is modified by another noun (i.e.- when it is possessed by another noun)

A PREVIEW TO TRAVEL

PACKING FOR YOUR TRIP

The most important thing that you would carry with yourself in your trip is a bag in which you can stuff all your belongings. Most round the world travelers use a backpack. They do not use suitcases simply for the ease that the backpack offers.

Backpacks are really versatile and can go through the process of getting thrown around on buses in various countries. You can carry them with you as you climb the stairs or even the hills. It is just easier to carry a backpack. Climbing an escalator? You can continue to walk as you were walking earlier, with the backpack on your back. You don't have to lift it like a suitcase – isn't this so much comfortable?

Now, what should you do in case you suffer from back problems?

Well, you could then look for a small suitcase with a long handle and wheels. It is a little difficult to carry these suitcases up and down the stairs but a number of companies do make some great travel friendly light weight travel suitcases.

Choosing the right backpack is one of the most crucial steps in your travel preparation. A very large sized backpack may just result in extra weight on your shoulders. Similarly, a very small backpack may not be able to pack all your belongings. A non-waterproof backpack may lead to your clothes and other stuff getting soaked if it rains. Let us look at a few basic characteristics that your backpack should have in order to qualify as sturdy and durable and thus, last you long:

Material: You must ensure that your backpack is 100 percent water proof. Now, some people prefer semi waterproof backpacks as well and then, carry with them tarps that can cover their bags in cases of emergency. In the end, it is a personal choice. Personally, I have never been caught in a severe downpour but have experienced minor rainstorms. I like to carry a 100% waterproof backpack. It just gives me more confidence that my stuff will be protected during a rainstorm.

Locks: All the pockets of your backpack must have two zippers that can be locked together. The locks that you purchase should be TSA friendly. TSA friendly locks enable the TSA to open and check your bags without breaking the locks. These are easily available at Walmart. Another option that you have is a lockable metal mesh around your bag. This mesh can be wrapped around your bag and then tied to a large object. This is extremely safe, especially in locations where your bag will be unattended for long. However, this also adds a lot of weight to your bag. Most photographers use the metal mesh in order to protect their expensive equipment. Regular travelers, however, use the two zipper option. Choose whatever works for you, but do ensure that your stuff is locked at all times.

Padded back, belt and straps: Try and get a lumbar shaped backpack if possible. This ensures a more natural arch and therefore limits the dangers of back problems. It also creates some space between your backpack and your back, allowing free circulation of air and preventing the build-up of sweat.

Most backpacks today, come with an adjustable chest strap. This helps in distributing the weight forward so that you do not suffer from back and shoulder problems. It enables equal distribution of weight on your upper body which takes the pressure off your shoulders and makes walking longer distances really comfortable.

I normally prefer backpacks with a padded hip belt and shoulder straps in addition to an adjustable chest strap. A padded hip belt helps in an even distribution of weight so that there is minimal load on the back. This leads to lesser strain and eventually lesser back problems. This belt is usually adjustable and you can tighten it for enhanced support.

The shoulder straps ensure that your backpack puts less pressure on your shoulders and also enable it to take the weight off your lower back. This makes carrying the weight more comfortable.

When you look for padding in shoulder straps, hip belt or chest straps, do make sure that the padding is extremely thick and made up of a single piece. This will make your backpack more durable.

Internal frame: Almost all backpacks today come with an internal frame. This implies that the support rods and frames are built into the backpack and are hidden from view. This makes your backpack slimmer and ensures that it doesn't get caught or entangled into anything else. Obviously, your backpack looks better and smarter. Never ever get a back pack with an external frame that can get caught into anything and also add extra weight to your luggage.

Okay, so you know the characteristics of a good backpack. Now, how do you ensure that you get your best fit?

Well, not one size fits all. So, the simple answer to this is – just go ahead and try it on! Most camping stores are able to stuff your backpack with approximately thirty pounds. Try it on your back and see if you are comfortable. Is the size okay? Is there room for some more stuff? Remember, there must be some extra room for mementos that you might want to pick up on your trip. Does your backpack feel comfortable and proportional to your body? If the answer to all these questions is a 'yes', then you have found your perfect backpack! You must also remember that larger sized backpacks are difficult to carry inside the plane and often need to be checked in. While this is not a major hassle, you may just have to spend some time at the baggage claim counter.

The prices of backpacks are dependent on fabric, size and brand and range within $99-$300. Personally, I would never buy a backpack for $300. I don't think a backpack is worth it! I feel that the more expensive versions are just more fancy and don't really serve the purpose. I am fine buying a backpack even if it is cheap but meets all the above mentioned criteria. However, if you are really crazy about branded versions, a great way to find a backpack within your budget is by buying last year's models that are generally available at a discount in specific stores.

Do make sure that you try on a number of backpacks and pick up the one that feels right for you. Just make sure that it meets the above criteria and matches your needs.

But what do you do with the existing stuff?

Well, you have two options: The first one is to minimize your stuff as much as possible by selling what you do not require. The second option involves keeping it in somebody's house or renting a public storage locker.

I prefer to go with the first option. But once again, it is a personal choice. I don't want to be worrying about stuff that I don't need and prefer to sell it via ebay. However, if your belongings are really important to you and you don't want to part with them, rent a public storage locker and put them in there. The public storage lockers charge a monthly rent. I would personally not want to worry about my TV or the monthly rental that I am supposed to pay while I trek over the Himalayas. I prefer to spend that money on my travel.

Again, make this choice wisely, depending on your needs.

And what about mail and bills?

Well, as much as possible try to automate things. How about using an automated bill pay system that deducts your payments from your account on a given day every month? This can simplify your life to a great extent.

With respect to mail, try and opt for paperless statements. This will reduce the amount of mail that you get. Apart from this, the only mail that you will really get will be stuff that you did not ask for or junk mail.

In case you really want your mail, I would suggest that you sign up with www.earthclassmail.com . They scan the envelope and send over the image to you. Now, you can decide what you want them to do with this envelope. Would you want them to open and scan all pages? Or should they ship this mail to your current address (wherever in the world you are)? They can even recycle or shred your mail. The membership for earthclassmail begins at $9.95 per month.
