Introduction

Poetry has the wondrous power to make us giggle, imagine, and learn. In fact, most of us were enjoying poetry well before we were able to read it on our own. Your students are sure to love the poems in Playful Poems That Build Reading Skills. They'll want to read them again and again, visiting favorite characters who'll seem like old friends.

Teaching with poetry is easy when you use the reproducibles provided in this resource. The Teacher Page and Student Activity Pages will help you target and teach the essential language skills your students need to learn—reading comprehension, spelling, vocabulary, phonics, writing, and more.

When you and your students share the poems and activities in this book, you'll discover animals and people who find themselves in extraordinary circumstances. And you'll discover how teaching with poetry celebrates language, excites the imagination, and enlivens your reading and writing program.

How to Use This Book

TEACHER PAGES

Introduce and follow up each poem with questions designed to promote thoughtful discussion about poetry and language. You'll find several Before You Read Questions and After You Read Questions on each Teacher Page. You'll also find a writing prompt to help students demonstrate reading comprehension and writing skills.

Teacher Page If Dogs Could Talk Use the questions and prompt below to encourage your students to discuss and think Before Reading Questions 1. Do dogs understand what people say to them? 2. Why do dogs grow!? 3. Why do dogs wag their tails? 1. How would things be different if dogs could talk? 2. Can you give a happy bark? a bark to scare? a bark that shows you are lonesome? 3. Why would the dog in the poem "have a lot to say" to the family? What would you do if a dog called you on the telephone? What would you tell him? $\frac{1}{2}\frac{1}{2}\frac{52}{2}\frac{1}{ If Dogs Could Talk If dogs could talk I think our dog Would have a lot to say. He'd probably tell my little brothe "SIT and now just STAY." He'd probably tell my sister, "How about an ice cream cone?" He'a probably tell my mother, "Please go get me a big bone." He'd probably tell my father, "Make a left turn up ahead." He'd probably tell me, "Kid, tonight I'm sleeping in your bed."

Before You Read Questions

Help your students bridge the gap between what they know and what they don't by discussing the Before You Read Questions with your class. These questions invite children to link what they already know, feel, and imagine with the poem. Before You Read Questions set children up for successful reading and comprehending of each poem.

After You Read Questions

Use the After You Read Questions to stimulate postreading class discussions that build reading comprehension and oral language skills. Invite your students to discuss the postreading questions in small groups of three or four. Then meet as a class. Share opinions, ideas, and interpretations. Ask your students to provide evidence from the poem to support their answers.

Writing Prompts

Follow up your class discussions with the instant writing prompts in this book, giving your students creative opportunities to reflect on the poem they've just read and thoroughly discussed. Before inviting your students to begin the writing process, encourage them to reread the poem. Rereading is a great way to get your students thinking about a poem's themes, action, and characters. The prompts are terrific as springboards to journal writing, too! For further practice with writing skills, ask your students to write in complete sentences or paragraph form.

STUDENT ACTIVITY PAGES

After your students read each poem, invite them to complete the reproducible activity pages Each reproducible activity page is perfect for students to work on independently, in small groups, or as homework.

Reading Comprehension In the Reading Comprehension portion of the student activity pages, students are asked to fill in the blanks with the most appropriate word from the poem. They use their knowledge of the poem to match quotations with characters, key words with lines of poetry, and so on. Invite your students to use the language of the poem as they problem-solve.

Rhyme Time

Encourage children to practice important rhyming skills with Rhyme Time, where specific words from the poem are grouped with other "special" words. The "special words" are listed on both the poem page and the reproducible student page. In Rhyme Time, your students act as "rhyme detectives" to determine which words rhyme. Then they need to think of two more words that rhyme with the "special word." Take rhyming one step further, and invite your students to use a yellow crayon or highlighter to mark which rhyming words belong in the same word family.

Read, Think, Draw

Here is one creative way to encourage children to think about the poetry they've read, follow simple step-by-step directions, and demonstrate comprehension through visual means. Visual learners are sure to like the Read, Think, Draw Activity. Your students' work will provide you with an opportunity to assess their comprehension of the poem—and you may even get a "sneak peek" at your students' developing drawing abilities.

Word Work

Knowing the difference between nonsense words and real words is an essential skill for young readers and writers. Unscrambling letters to form each poem's "special words" is one way for kids to apply what they know about initial letter sounds, word endings, consonant blends, and more. Invite your students to discuss how they were able to unscramble the words. Sharing problem-solving strategies and word-building insights with classmates is a great way for students to build self-confidence in their reading and writing abilities.

Getting the Most From Each Poem

Imagine If

Invite your students to imagine what would happen in a poem if it featured a different animal. Imagine if it was a porcupine helping the farmer in "The Farm Octopus." Imagine if had a been a kangaroo helping to do the housework in "Dino Helps With Housework." Discuss what kinds of unusual things could happen in the poem.

Write Riddles

student with a

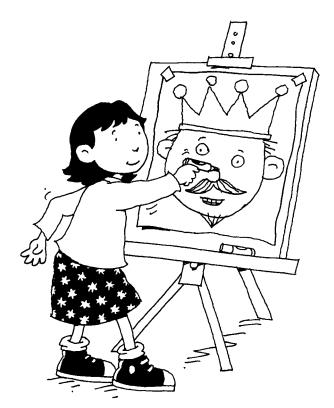

Have your students practice writing and critical-thinking skills by writing riddles about the poems in Playful Poems That Build Reading Skills. For example, ask your students to use two clues from a poem to develop a riddle. (Who took a sticky seat and had eyes that grew very big? It was the fly in "Fly Gets Tricked," of course.) Provide each piece of color construction paper. Have kids fold their paper in half and write their riddles on the top flap. Then have them write the riddle's answers and the titles of the poem on the inside. If you like, have them illustrate the riddle's answer, too. Post each of the riddles on a bulletin board in your classroom. Your students will enjoy looking for clues and solving one another's riddles.

Illustrate

Show your students an illustration from one of the poems without reading the lines of the poem. Ask them to guess what the poem will be about. (What clues has the illustrator provided about the subject of the poem? themes? setting?) Invite your students to act as illustrators, giving you an opportunity to assess comprehension through visual representation. Provide children with paper, crayons, and markers. Then ask all of your students to illustrate the same poem.

You're sure to see a myriad of interpretations. That's okay. Does each student demonstrate a basic knowledge of the characters? setting? action? Encourage your students to revisit the poem as they compose their illustration and to include details from the poem to "show" what they know.

Pantomime

Have groups of children reenact a poem through the age-old art of pantomime. First, divide the class into several groups of three or four. Tell each member of the group what role he or she will play. For instance, in "My Pet Tiger" one student could be Terry T., one a teacher, one the mother, and one the child. When you introduce this activity to younger children, you may want to give guidance as to how to pantomime. For instance, you might suggest the following actions. The tiger could sit quietly and lick its paws. The teacher could use a pointer and write on the chalkboard. The mother could shake her head from side to side, and the child could smile and pat the tiger. Invite your students to guess which poem the pantomime portrays. Discuss other ways various roles could be played.

Create an Adjective Word Wall

Send your students on a hunt for descriptive words within the lines of the poems. First, read the poem aloud with your students. Then list the descriptive words on chart paper as your students name them. Some words they may find in "Ant Take a Cruise" are: rough, bouncy, steep, nosy, and enormous. Post the list in your writing center as a word wall so that children can readily incorporate them into their writing. If you like, invite your students to use word-wall words in a sentence, a poem, or a short story.

My Funny Octopus

Use the questions and prompt below to encourage your students to discuss and think about the poem.

Before Reading Questions

- 1. What is special about an octopus? How is an octopus different from a fish?
- 2. Why do you think octopuses have so many arms?
- 3. How might life be different for the octopus if he had only four arms?

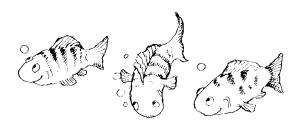

After Reading Questions

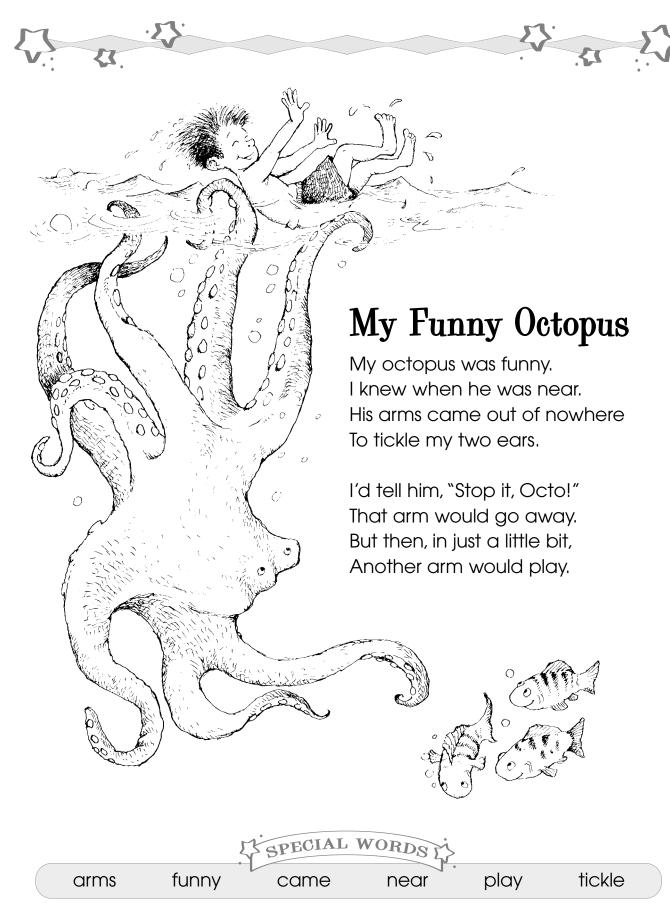

- 1. How would it feel to have all of Octo's arms around you at once?
- 2. Which would be more fun, going to a dance with Octo or watching him play the piano?
- 3. What would it be like to play cards with Octo?

Writing Prompt

Describe what it would be like to have a pet octopus. Where would you keep it? What would you feed it?

- 2. How could an octopus become a helper on a farm?
- 3. Where do octopuses usually live?

After Reading Questions

- 1. Why did the other farm animals complain about the octopus?
- 2. Why was it difficult for the octopus to do a good job?
- 3. How do you think the farmer felt when he took the octopus back to the ocean? Why?

Writing Prompt

Why do you think the octopus might be happier in the ocean?

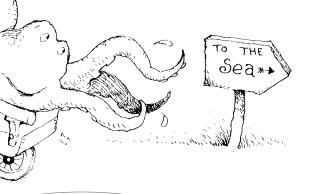

The farmer's octopus could work As fast as eight good hands. The octopus could hoe and feed And milk and plow the land.

The cow complained, "He milks too fast."
The chicken said, "That's right.
He also gathers up my eggs
Before it's even light!"

The horse said, "When he rides my back He's always falling off." The pig oinked, "I once found him

Swimming around inside my trough!"

And so the farmer took the Octopus back to the sea.
The octopus said, "Don't be sad.
The ocean's home to me."

Cat and Mouse

Our cat was sleeping quietly
Upon her favorite couch.
The clock had just struck midnight
When she thought she heard a mouse.

She opened one eye just a crack. A shadow scampered past. And then our cat was on the floor And running very fast.

The mouse knew something big was near And ran with all its might. It felt the cat's hot breath And knew that soon sharp claws would strike.

The mouse somehow got to its hole Before the cat could bite. And hiding there it thought, "I almost fed the cat tonight."

Writing Prompt

Solution Service Service

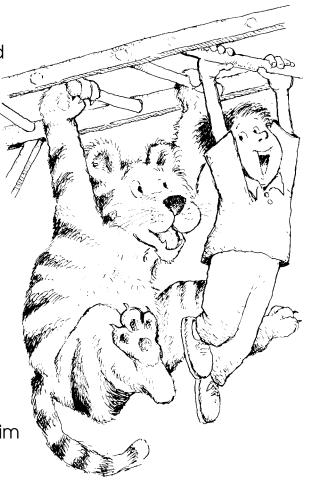

I have a little tiger.
His name is Terry T.
We found him in the neighborhood
But now he stays with me.

We get up in the morning.
We have our bowl of mush.
Then afterward I brush our teeth
And off to school we rush.

He'll sit there in the corner. The teacher doesn't mind, For Terry watches as I work Until it's recess time.

Then everybody likes to play
With Terry on the grass.
He chases them and they chase him
And he can run so fast.

He really is my best friend.
I think he loves me too,
Though Mommy says with Terry here
We're living in a zoo.

The snake ate a rabbit And suddenly hopped. He said, "I am seasick, This hopping must stop."

He let out the rabbit Then ate a big frog And found himself leaping Right over a log.

Snake said, "I can't take it, This leaping's no good." He let out the frog, Hoping frog understood.

He ate a small bird From its feet to its beak Then found himself starting To sing and to speak.

He let the bird go
And laid down for a rest.
"I'm hungry," he thought,
"But I'm scared of what's next."

Dino Helps With Housework

Mommy, Dino's at our door, He says he wants to play. "Tell him you've got chores To do and cannot play today."

Mommy, Dino wants to help, He says he knows a lot. "Ask him if he vacuums rooms And washes dirty pots."

Mommy, Dino says he'll help, But doesn't know those things. Maybe if I show him how We'll quickly get them clean. Dino, Mommy says come in, Now here, you take the broom. I'll go get the dust pan. Let's go start inside my room.

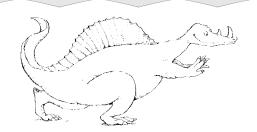

Sweep and vacuum, then we dust, And scrub the pots and pans. Dino, I'm so proud of you And all your helping hands.

Mom, can we go out to play? Dino thinks we're through. Dino, Mom says it's okay, Come on, I'll race with you.

I climbed inside the long, deep trunk, The air was damp and gray. I walked across some peanut shells And grass and bits of hay.

Then halfway up the bumpy trail
The elephant yelled, "Stop!"
"Scratch!" he said. "With all your might,
Just jump and kick and hop."

I scratched and itched and itched and scratched, He finally yelled, "Enough!"
And then he blew me out his trunk
With lots of other stuff.

The elephant gave one big laugh And said, "I thank you much." And then he put his trunk on me And gave me a warm touch.

Writing Prompt

Describe three ways the bear and the bees could make peace.

I walked into the forest.
The sun was high and bright.
But suddenly I tripped and fell
And there was no more light.

I felt my hands and fingers.
All seemed to be okay.
But looking around I realized
I'd fallen in a cave.

I heard some water dripping.
I heard some bats take off.
I heard a big, deep, scary growl
And then a loud bear cough.

I saw off in a corner A bear upon a bed. He had a swollen mouth. I saw a bandage on his head.

I walked up very gently
And asked if he was sick.
He coughed and growled and
Looked at me and said,
"My tongue can't lick."

He said, "It happened last week.
I found a hive of bees.
With golden honey dripping down
I had to climb that tree."

"I threw my head into the hive And licked with all I had, And everything was going well Until it turned quite bad."

"A bee was very angry.

He buzzed, 'We've had enough!'

And then he stung me on my tongue.

His sting hurt me so much!"

"I quickly lost my footing And fell down to the ground And that's where my mom said, Two hours later I was found."

I said, "Bear, I'm so sorry
Your tongue can't even lick.
I hope you get well soon.
I know it's no fun to be sick."
