Acknowledgments

I wish to convey my special thanks to Kim, my wife, and Ron Nagel. Their help and support made it possible to finish this project.

My appreciation also goes to Christopher Brown, the editor of this book, for his advice and suggestions. Last but not least, I would like to thank Susan R. Moore for her meticulous review of the book.

Introduction

In the early 1970s I went on vacation to Galicia, Spain. On the thirty-four-hour train journey from Bern, Switzerland, to La Coruña I got into conversation with a Spaniard. He was very knowledgeable about Spanish literature and recommended to me the writings of Cela; this was the first time that I had heard of this author.

Many years later, in late 1989, a headline in the arts pages of a newspaper caught my attention: “The Nobel Prize for Literature goes to Camilo José Cela.” This prompted me, finally, to acquaint myself with his works. Typical of his style is La Colmena, a novel peppered with colloquial and slang expressions. As I read it, I felt the need for a reference for English speakers that dealt comprehensively with such Spanish terms, so I began to jot down words. From these beginnings I developed this dictionary of commonly used Spanish expressions that are often difficult to find in standard dictionaries. My sources have been as diverse as the expressions themselves: Nobel Prize–winning authors and Juan Pérez (the man in the street), professors and students, contemporary and classical literature, dictionaries, movies, and newspapers from across the Spanish-speaking world.

The Big Red Book of Spanish Idioms is a comprehensive reference designed to open up the world of idiomatic Spanish to English-speaking learners, including students, travelers, and language-lovers, who have an intermediate or advanced level of understanding of Spanish. The dictionary contains a broad collection of over 4,000 commonly used idiomatic and colloquial expressions in Spanish and almost 8,000 English translations. Particular care has been taken to match like with like, so that Spanish idioms are matched with idiomatic English expressions of a similar tone or register. This feature also makes the dictionary a particularly helpful reference for Spanish-speaking learners of English.

Using the Dictionary

1. LOCATION OF A SPANISH EXPRESSION

To look up a particular Spanish phrase or expression in order to find its English equivalent, turn to the main Spanish-English dictionary. Each expression is listed under one particular Spanish headword, and the headwords appear in alphabetical order, though initial articles (el, la, el/la, las, los) are not alphabetized. The idiomatic expressions (preceded by ►) are listed below the headword:

la nueva piece of news

- coger a alg. de nuevas (fig.) to take s.o. by surprise
- hacerse de nuevas (fig.) to act surprised, to pretend to be surprised, to pretend not to have heard/known anything [about it]

To allow for useful groupings by sense, the idiomatic expressions are not necessarily listed in alphabetical order.

In some instances, your selection of a key word within an expression may not match the chosen headword in this dictionary. To allow for this, numerous cross-references are included, indicated by ▷. The correct location of the expression in the dictionary is indicated by the boldfacing of the headword:

- ▷ aburrido (ser algo ~ a más no poder)
- ▷ adornar (quedarse para ~ altares)
- ▷ confianza (ganarse la ~ de alg.)

These cross-references are integrated alphabetically within the dictionary. Whenever a Spanish word is both a headword and a cross-reference, its cross-references are listed below the idiomatic expressions in alphabetical order.

Some entries and English equivalents are also followed by cross-references (indicated by ▷) to idiomatic expressions where a more extensive list of English equivalents is provided. These further expressions are equally appropriate but for the purposes of saving space were not duplicated for every appropriate idiomatic expression.

- palmarla (pop.) to cash/hand in one's chips (fam., hum.) ▷ cascar[la]
- la nana grandma/granny (fam.)
- ▶ del año de/en el año de la nana (fam.)
donkey's years ago ▷ año de Maricastaña

2. ENGLISH MEANINGS

The English meaning of every headword is provided, except where no equivalent exists and the word is only comprehensible within an idiomatic expression.

Every Spanish idiomatic expression is followed by at least one English equivalent. As far as is possible, the English expression has been selected to match the tone or register of the Spanish phrase. Note that in many instances the literal meaning of the headword will not match the English equivalent of following idiomatic expressions.

Some Spanish entry phrases have more than one sense in English. These senses are numbered (a), (b), etc.

el cerro hill

- ▶ irse por los cerros de Úbeda (fig.) (a) to talk
[a lot of] nonsense or rubbish (fam.) or rot (fam., Br.E.), to give silly or ridiculous or absurd answers (b) to wander from the subject/point, to go off at a tangent (fig.)

For clarity, some English entries are prefaced by explanatory tags that may indicate the context or provide the neutral term in English:

- ▶ la lana (fam., Méjico) (money): dough (sl., Am.E.), bread (sl.), sugar (sl.), brass/dosh/
lolly (sl., Br.E.), wampum (sl., Am.E.)

3. EXAMPLE SENTENCES

Example sentences and phrases that incorporate the idiomatic expression are indicated by ♦ and are followed by their English translation. Over 1,800 examples are included in instances where it is judged particularly helpful to see the context in which an expression is used:

la sarta series

► una sarta de (fig., fam.) [whole] series of, [whole] string or catalogue of (fig.) ♦ una sarta de mentiras a string/pack of lies ♦ una sarta de disparates a load/pack of nonsense or rubbish (Br.E.) (fam.) ♦ Nos soltaron una sarta de insultos. They hurled a string of insults at us.

4. ENGLISH-SPANISH DICTIONARY AND INDEX

If you are looking for a Spanish equivalent of an English expression, consult the English-Spanish Dictionary and Index. The English expressions are listed alphabetically by key word. The words to (as part of the infinitive) and to be (before an adjectival expression) are not alphabetized. Wherever the key word is not the first term in the expression, the full expression usually appears in parentheses with the key word represented by a tilde ~.

The English expression is followed by one or more equivalent Spanish idiomatic expressions. This may serve your immediate requirements, but for a more complete treatment of these Spanish expressions, locate them in the Spanish-English dictionary under their respective headwords. The headword is always indicated in bold text:

buttocks las cachas
canard el cuento chino
come what may salga lo que salga/saliere (▷ salir)
to be dead tired estar muerto [de cansancio]
luck (trusting to ~) a la buena de Dios (▷ bueno)
to see (oh, I ~!) ¡acabáramos! (▷ acabar)
to talk turkey [with s.o.] cantarías claras [a alg.]
to vamoose largarse

Exceptions

Bold type is not used when the headword is the first word in the expression:

to be dead on one's feet caerse de cansancio/sueño

Or when the Spanish entry is an article + noun in the singular:

chatterbox la cotorra
crowd una nube

Spanish-English Idiomatic Dictionary

Over 4,000 Spanish idiomatic phrases and expressions (indicated by ►) are presented under Spanish headwords that appear in alphabetical order. Many expressions are followed by example sentences (marked ◆). Also included are numerous cross-references (preceded by ▷) that indicate in bold the appropriate headword under which that expression can be found. For a more complete explanation of conventions and abbreviations used in this dictionary, consult the Introduction.
