Little Duck

What is that sound?

What do you think Mama Duck hears?

Something is saying,
"Quack, Quack!"

What do you think is making that sound?

That's a funny looking foot!

Whose foot do you think that belongs to?

Hey, it's Little Duck!

How do you think Little Duck feels?

Picture Interpretation and Reading (for all stories): Introduce students to Little Duck, a sweet duckling who is the focus of the following stories. Suggest that the students look at the pictures and talk about what is happening. Have the students relate what they see to their own lives and experiences. Be aware of the vocabulary levels and needs of the group. Key words may be reinforced or developed by writing them on the board as each picture/picture scenario is discussed. First, have students read the story silently by themselves. Help students with any unfamiliar words. Next, have students read the story orally. Discussion questions have been provided to serve as a discussion guide.

Carolyn Talks to Her Mom

Carolyn's mom was reading a book in the den. "Mom, can I ask you something?" asked Carolyn.

"Sure, honey," said Mrs. Jones.

"Mom, I know I have teddy bears from Grandma. I even have stuffed animals from Aunt Linda. But I really want a pet I can hold and take care of," said Carolyn.

Carolyn's mom put down her book. "Pets take a lot of work," said Mrs. Jones. "And you don't just take care of a pet for a day, or a week, or even a month. Pets are part of the family for years. Do you think you would have time to take care of a pet? Why don't you really think about it."

Time for a Pet

Carolyn went back to her room. She had just started school. Her new teacher gave her lots of homework. She had books to read and stories to write. Her class was even going to put on a school play.

Maybe she didn't have time to take care of a pet after all. Carolyn held her teddy bear tight. "What do you think I should do, teddy bear?" she asked. But the teddy bear didn't say anything at all because he wasn't real.

Knock, Knock

"Knock, knock," said Carolyn's dad. He stood in the doorway. "Hi, Carolyn. Mom said you wanted a pet. What kind of pet did you want?"

"Hi, Dad. I want a pet that is soft, like a kitten or a puppy," said Carolyn.

"Well, pets like dogs and cats are a lot of work," said Mr. Jones.

"How about a pet turtle or a fish tank with lots of pretty fish? We could get a blue fish or maybe even an orange and white clown fish. What do you say?"

But Carolyn was sad. She knew she could never hug a turtle or a fish.

Yes or No?

All night, Carolyn tossed in her bed. She knew she could take care of a pet. She hoped her parents would say yes. She would give her pet fresh water. She would brush its fur. And she would always love it.

Carolyn's last name was Jones. So her new pet would be named "Promise Jones." She liked the name already.

Carolyn ran down the stairs at 7:00 in the morning. "Wow, you are up early!" said Carolyn's mom.

A Gift

Carolyn's dad was waiting at the front door of the house. He had a gift in his hand. Carolyn ran to her dad. "Dad, our new kitten comes tomorrow! He is so soft! He looks just like a cotton ball or a cloud," said Carolyn.

"Should we still call him Promise? If he is so soft, maybe we should call him Cloudy or Mr. Cotton," said Carolyn's dad.

"No. I already told him his name was Promise Jones," said Carolyn.

"Well, I bought food, litter, a litter box, and a gift for Promise Jones," said Carolyn's dad.

Carolyn unwrapped the gift. It was a soft cat bed shaped in a circle. A kitten would feel safe and warm inside it. Carolyn hugged her dad.

Promise Jones Comes Home

The next day, Promise Jones came home. Carolyn and her mom and dad sat in the family room. Slowly, they opened the kitten carrier.

First, one tiny, white foot pressed on the rug. Then, another tiny foot came out. Next came Promise Jones' head poking out of the carrier. "Hi, Promise Jones," said Carolyn. She held out her hand. Promise looked around the room.

"Meow," he said. He walked over to Carolyn. Carolyn held him in her arms. Then, she kissed his tiny head. Carolyn said, "Promise Jones, you have found a home. We promise."
