You've Got Mail!

E-mail can be a great way to keep in touch with friends and family members.

Electronic mail, or e-mail, is an important part of our world. E-mails are messages. They are sent and read using computers and other tools.

Once you send an e-mail, you can't take it back. That is why you must get your e-mails just right. Let's find out how!

REMINDER

Be Safe

Be safe when using e-mail and the Internet.
Remember these points:

1. Follow school and home rules of computer safety.
2. Ask an adult you trust before sharing personal facts about yourself in an e-mail. These include your name and address.
3. Never talk to strangers online or agree to meet in person.
4. Tell an adult if you see anything online that makes you feel uncomfortable.

Smart Web surfers follow Internet safety rules.

From Me to You

Do you have an e-mail address? If not, an adult can help you set up an e-mail account. Your parents may set up special controls. These controls are meant to keep you safe. For example, you may only be able to send e-mails to family members and friends.

One part of an e-mail address is the username. You may be able to make yours up. Think of something fun for your username. Don't use your full name. Imagine a girl named Kasey. She plays the piano. She might use kplayskeys as her username. Her email address would be kplayskeys@xyz.com.

Think of a friend you would like to e-mail. Let's send that person a message. Here's what you'll need to complete the activities in this book:

- A computer that is connected to the Internet
- An e-mail account

ACTIVITY

Addressing an E-mail

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Open your e-mail account.
2. Click on the "New" button. A message window should appear.
3. Look for the "To:" box. This is where you enter the addresses of the person who will receive your message. Type your friend's e-mail address in this space.
4. The "Cc:" box is next. Cc stands for "carbon copy." A copy of the e-mail is sent to addresses entered here. Do you want someone else to read this e-mail? Enter his or her address in the "Cc:" box.
5. Look for the "Subject:" box. This lets the receiver know the topic of your e-mail. Type in the "Subject:" space. Your subject line should only be a few words long.

On to the next step of writing an e-mail!

From:	socccgirl@xyz.com
To:	kplayskeys@xyz.com
Cc:
Bcc:
Subject:	Party at the Library

The main body of the email is a large empty rectangular box.

Are you entering more than one address in a "To:" or "Cc:" box? Put a comma between each e-mail address.

You may also come across a "Bcc:" box. Bcc stands for "Blind carbon copy." Using this tool lets you send a copy of the e-mail to someone in secret. Others who receive the message can't see the addresses entered in this space.

Keep It Friendly

Choose your words carefully in an e-mail. You do not want to hurt someone's feelings.

Think about talking to a friend face-to-face. You can see if she understands you. In an e-mail, the person only sees your words. Never write an e-mail when you are angry. Take some time to cool down. How is writing an e-mail different? The person only sees your words.

Sometimes the words you choose can have two meanings. Be sure your true meaning is clear. For example, a friend e-mails you a picture of his new haircut. You respond by saying, "That's wild!" You mean that you think it is a great haircut. Could your friend think it means something else?

Are you asking questions in your e-mail? Read them out loud. Are the questions clear? Will the reader understand?

Be careful what you type!

A cartoon mouse head with pink ears and a cord is on the left. A yellow pencil with a pink eraser is on the right. The word "ACTIVITY" is written in yellow on a dark blue semi-circle.

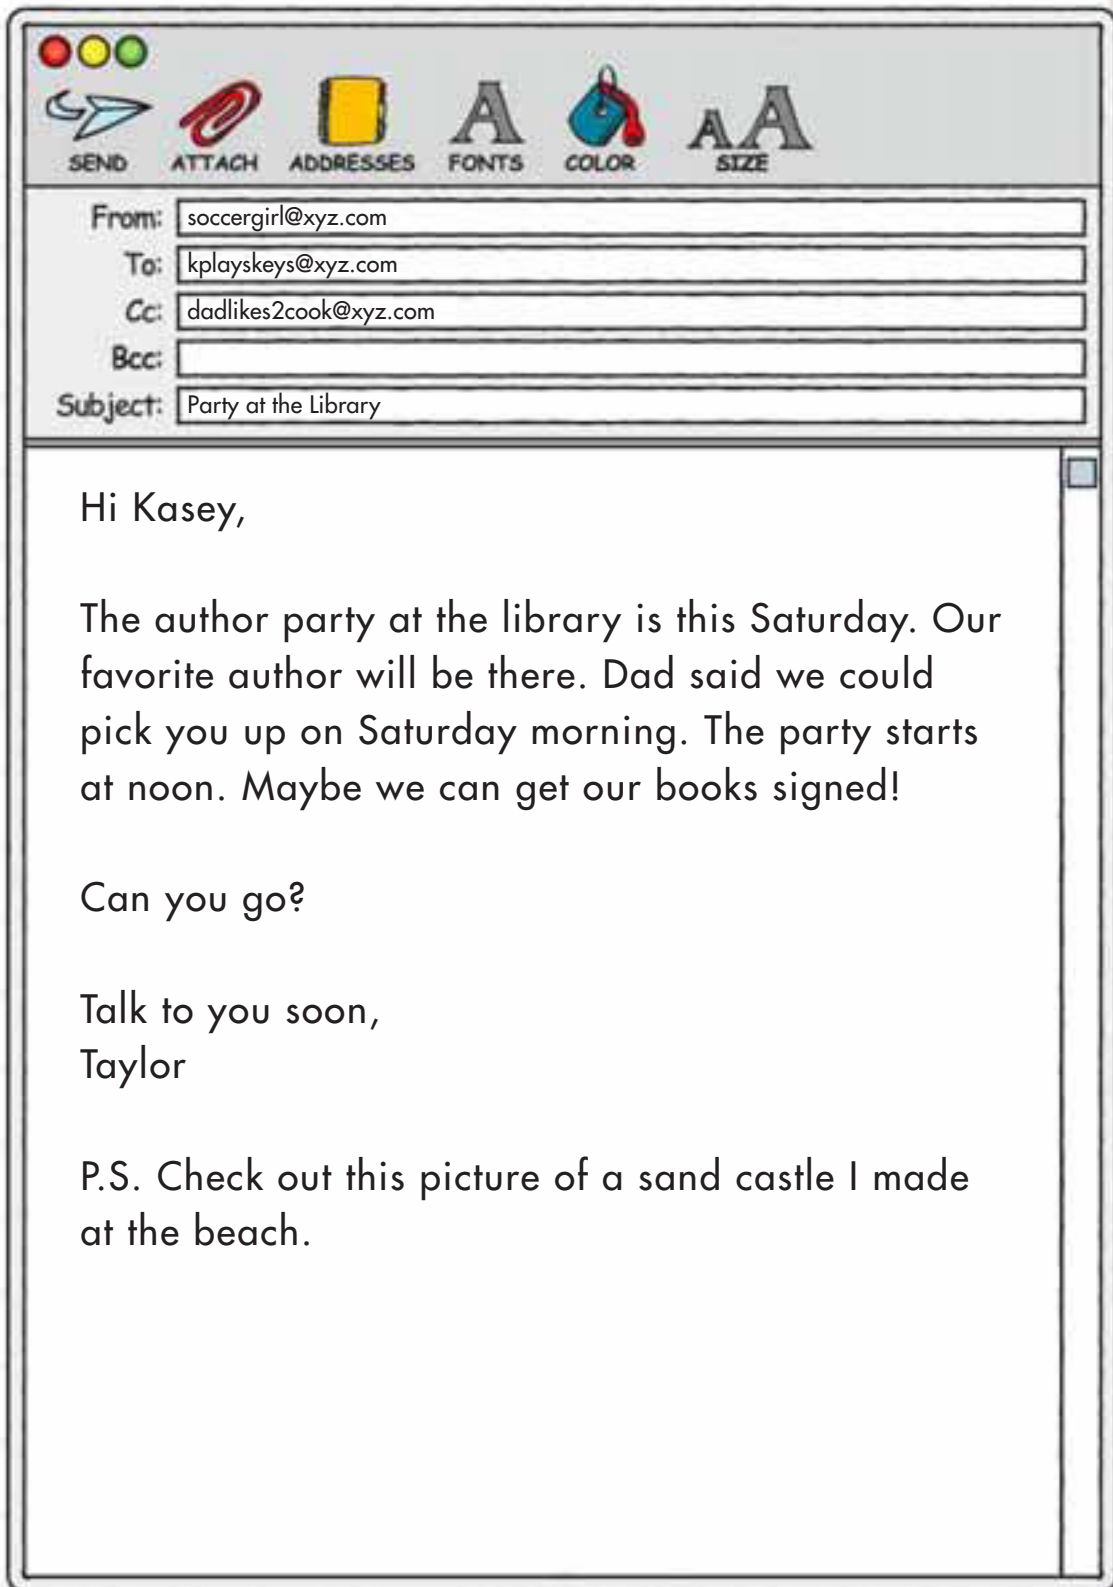

ACTIVITY

Writing an E-mail

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. Begin your e-mail with a greeting. Hi and Dear are common greetings, followed by the reader's name. Put a comma after the name.
2. Next, type the body of your e-mail. This is where you share your news. E-mails are usually short. Try to word your message in a few sentences.
3. Type a closing after the body. It is a way of saying good-bye. Thanks, and Sincerely, are two closings. Put a comma after the closing. Type your name on the line after the closing.

Extras

You can change the look of your e-mails. How? You can use different fonts, colors, and emoticons. Fonts are sets of letters and numbers of a certain size and style. An emoticon is a group of marks that shows how you feel.

ACTIVITY

Jazz Up Your E-mail

INSTRUCTIONS:

How you change fonts and colors depends on your e-mail program. Here is one way:

1. Go back to the e-mail you wrote earlier. Use the computer mouse to highlight your message. Click on the "Font" list. You will see a list of fonts. Choose one.
2. Click on the "Font Size" list. Do you see a list of numbers? These are font sizes. Choose a size.
3. You can also change the color of your font. Click on the "Font Color" button. Choose a color.
4. Add an emoticon after a sentence. Want to show that you are happy? Type a colon, a hyphen, and a right parenthesis. Your emoticon should look like this: :-) Do you see a smiley face?

Subject: Party at the Library

Hi Kasey,

The author party at the library is this Saturday. Our FAVORITE author will be there. Dad said we could pick you up on Saturday morning. The party starts at noon. Maybe we can get our books signed! :-)

CAN YOU GO?

Talk to you soon,
Taylor

P.S. Check out this picture of a sand castle I made at the beach.

Some e-mail programs include a row of pictures called icons. If your program has icons, you can click on the icons, you change the font size, font color, and add emoticons.

And Another Thing

Attachments are files that you send with an e-mail. Pictures are one kind of attachment.

ACTIVITY

Attachments

Let's attach a picture to the e-mail. Check with an adult before sharing any pictures with other people.

INSTRUCTIONS:

1. How you attach a file depends on your e-mail program. In some programs, you click on a button that says "Attach Files." Sometimes, this button only has a paper clip icon. Click the correct button for your program.
2. Find the file you need in the window that appears. Click on it. Click the button in this window that attaches the file to your e-mail. It may be called "Choose" or something similar.

You are almost ready to send your e-mail. First, you must look it over.

ACTIVITY

Final Changes

1. Read your e-mail carefully. Read it out loud. Check everything one more time:

- YES NO Are the e-mail addresses correct?
- YES NO Did I fill in the "Subject:" box?
- YES NO Is there a greeting and a closing?
- YES NO Is the body clear and easy to follow?
- YES NO Does my true meaning come across?
- YES NO Did I play with fonts or use emoticons?
- YES NO Are the words spelled correctly?
- YES NO Did I attach the correct file?

2. Make changes to your e-mail if needed.

All that is left is to send your e-mail on its way.
Hit the "Send" button!

That Was Easy!

Your friend will be glad to get an e-mail from you. Soon, you may get a reply.

Writing e-mails is fun and easy. Are you already thinking about your next e-mail?

You can send an e-mail to anyone who has an e-mail address.

About the Authors

Cecilia Minden, PhD, is the former Director of the Language and Literacy Program at Harvard Graduate School of Education. While at Harvard, Dr. Minden taught several writing courses for teachers. She is now a full-time literacy consultant and the author of more than 100 books for children. Dr. Minden lives in Chapel Hill, North Carolina, with her husband, Dave Cupp, and a cute but spoiled Yorkie named Kenzie.

Kate Roth has a doctorate from Harvard University in Language and Literacy and a masters from Columbia University Teachers College in Curriculum and Teaching. Her work focuses on writing instruction in the primary grades. She has taught first grade, kindergarten, and Reading Recovery. She has also instructed hundreds of teachers from around the world in early literacy practices. She lives in Shanghai, China, with her husband and three children, ages 2, 6, and 9. They do a lot of writing to stay in touch with friends and family and record their experiences.

Writing is an important skill that you use almost every day. You use it in school, with friends, at home—almost anywhere!
